Luxury Liner Sinks

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 27.—The Empress of Australia, reported in service recently as a troop transport, radioed tonight she had been torpedoed and shelled off the West African coast, then suddenly became silent.

Tropical Radio said the 21,833-ton vessel, which brought the King and Queen of England to this continent two years ago, called for assistance at 10:38 p. m. (E. S. T.) saying she had been attacked 200 miles off Dakar, French West Africa.

The ship's operator, Tropical reported, said the vessel was "down by the bow" and had put lifeboats over the port side. Tropical intercepted a 10:53 p. m. message relating the ship was "being shelled again."

Tropical said the 590-foot ship tried to send out another message at 10:55 p. m., but the signals were unintelligible and cut off abruptly.

Owned by Canadian Pacific

Position of the ship was given as latitude 15 degrees 30 minutes north, longitude 18 degrees 20 minutes west.

The Empress of Australia was built in 1914 and was owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

She has been reported in service recently as a troop transport.

Last October 3, she stopped to rescue the entire crew of torpedoed Dutch liner, Volendam, in mid-Atlantic.

Built in Germany

After the 1939 tour of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth another Canadian-Pacific liner, the 42,348-ton Empress of Britain, took the royal couple back to England. That ship was torpedoed and sunk in October, with a loss of 45 men, while the British were attempting to tow her back to port after she had been badly damaged by Nazi bombers.

The Empress of Australia, built at Stettin, Germany, for the Hamburg-American line, was turned over to England under the terms of the Versailles Treaty in 1921.

She was first placed in the Vancouver-Far East service. The ship was damaged in the Japanese earthquake of 1923 but was held in Yokohama Harbor as a relief station. She was further damaged when fire swept the ravaged city a week later.

Willkie Chats With Churchill, Traffic Bobby, Injured Tommy

HANDS ACROSS THE SEA—Prime Minister Winston Churchill (right) receives Wendell Willkie at their luncheon engagement yesterday in London

London, Jan. 27.—Wendell Willkie, here on his own fact-finding expedition, covered London in whirlwind fashion today and met a number of people he had never seen before, including Prime Minister Winston Churchill, Harry L. Hopkins, a traffic bobby, and a simple Tommy Atkins with his arm in a sling.

Everywhere he went and with everyone he talked, he evinced keen interest in all phases of Britain's part in the war.

Willkie made a quick tour of old London which German raiders recently subjected to a terrible rain of fire bombs, paying especial attention to the devastated area around St. Paul's cathedral and the Guildhall ruins. He lunched with Churchill and had dinner with Lord Stamp, the for-

Traffic Inquiry Ordered Now By Randolph

A "do it now" ultimatum for striking at the crux of Washington traffic difficulties was handed yesterday to the streets and traffic subcommittee of the House District Committee by Chairman Jennings Randolph.

Renaming Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, to head the traffic group, Randolph ordered an immediate inquiry into causes of the city's worst accident fatality record in history, and instructed Schulte to have a report ready not later than February 10, when the full committee meets again.

Although no definite date for subcommittee hearings was announced by Schulte, he indicated discussions with District officials on necessary remedial legislation would begin sometime this week. Last week, he scheduled such a conference, but canceled it a few days later because he was "too busy" to arrange the get-together.

Calling a meeting of his committee yesterday primarily to organize the streets and traffic subcommittee, Randolph directed the group to take immediate steps to ascertain reasons behind the mount-

Student Killed, 5 Hurt in Crash On Icy Road

A North Carolina State College student was killed and five persons were injured last night in a collision on snow-covered Route 1, 2 miles south of Woodbridge, Va.

The dead youth is William N. May, 21, of Lenoir, N. C.

With May, who was driving, were four other seniors in aeronautical engineering, en route to Washington on an inspection trip. Injured, but not seriously, they were taken to Alexandria Hospital. They are Fred O. Smith, 21, of McLainsville, N. C.; Fred W. Randall, 21, of Bristol, Pa.; Edward R. Johnson, 23, of Paw Creek, N. C., and Thomas E. Haynes, 22, of Burlington, N. C. Smith and Johnson are members of the college wrestling team.

John Griffin, of 2115 C Street Northwest, operator of the second auto, also was injured and taken to the hospital by the ambulance of Hall's funeral home, Occoquan, Va. May's body was taken to Hall's, where an inquest will be held today by Dr. E. H. Marstellar, Prince William County coroner.

In all, there were 12 students and a faculty adviser driving to Wash-

Repair Delayed Too Long

Youth Killed, Girl Companion Overcome by Exhaust Fumes

Failure of a 22-year-old District youth to repair a damaged exhaust system on his 4-year-old automobile was declared by both Prince Georges County and District medical officers yesterday to be the cause of his death and the serious condition of his 18-year-old girl companion, found unconscious early yesterday on Landover Road, near the Defense Highway.

BRAST

Victor J. Brast, 22-year-old timekeeper at Fort Belvoir, Va., of 1509 Twenty-second Street Northwest, was pronounced dead by physicians at Casualty Hospital shortly after 3 a. m. yesterday. His companion, Lola Jenkins, 18, of 7123 Buchanan Street, Landover Hills, Md., is in an "undetermined condition" at the hospital.

Brast, who was a native of Roosevelt, N. Y., and his companion were found slumped in the front seat of the sedan by Charles Cheek, 30, of Riverdale, Md., who passed the car, its motor running, while going to the aid of a friend whose car had slipped from the icy road into a ditch. Failing to find his friend, Cheek returned and stopped to look into the automobile, because it was parked in an odd position.

Cheek rushed the stricken couple to Casualty Hospital, but Brast was pronounced dead on arrival.

Duce Orders Ciano to Duty On Bomber

Foreign Affairs Chief And Son-in-Law Of Mussolini Is 4th Minister on Front

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Jan. 27.—The greatest political development of the war was announced late this evening in a laconic communique saying that Foreign Minister Count Ciano has gone to the front.

That can and does mean many obvious things, but it primarily means that Premier Mussolini's son-in-law and the trusted interpreter of his foreign policy for five years has left his post for an unspecified length of time.

Count Ciano remains foreign minister, but he can scarcely work at the job while he is piloting a plane on the Greek or African front. Therefore it is reasonable to suppose that Signor Mussolini himself will completely direct Italy's foreign affairs.

Will Lead Squadron

The communique announcing this long-expected decision reads as follows:

"The minister of foreign affairs, Galeazzo Ciano, a lieutenant colonel of the royal air force, has resumed command of a formation of bombers in the zone of operations."

Cianetti was undersecretary of corporations and resigned to become captain of artillery in active service January 21.

Ciano carried Italy, on behalf of Signor Mussolini, through the period of the formation of the Axis with Germany, the Spanish War and now the present conflict. It was a period of initial triumphs and recent defeats.

Under the circumstances, it will be impossible to prevent people from drawing obvious conclusions, but for the moment all that can be said is that Italy is clearly on the verge of important new decisions, internally and externally.

Count Ciano is an experienced pilot who fought all through the Ethiopian war as a major in the air force.

Two-Way Battle Raging

Rome, Jan. 27 (U.P.)—Today's war communique said columns of British "iron camel" tanks and armored cars were striking directly across the desert upon Bengasi, fighting their way westward around El Mechili which is 60 miles inland from the Libyan coast, below Derna.

At El Mechili the British were about 130 miles from Bengasi.

The Italians claimed to be holding strategic positions in the region of El Mechili, where fighting was said to have been going on for two

Committee Head To Offer Bill Against Walkouts On Naval Work

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, announced yesterday he would introduce legislation to forestall strikes in defense plants by setting up a system of compulsory mediation and arbitration covering all naval work.

At the same time, Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee disclosed that a plan for a Congressional investigation of all strikes at plants having defense orders would be considered by the group this morning. He predicted his committee would order a thorough probe of the situation.

The two Congressional announcements came as word was received here of strikes being called at two more defense plants, and the return to work of employes at two other establishments.

Two Strikes End, Two Begin

Meanwhile, negotiations to end the strike that has made 7,000 men idle in the Allis-Chalmers' Manufacturing Co. plant near Milwaukee brought arrangements for a joint management-labor conference today. The company is working on $40,000,000 worth of defense orders.

Vinson said his measure was modeled on the Railroad Mediation Act, and would set up a board which would be empowered to step in and take charge whenever labor disputes threatened to interfere with the naval defense program. The bill also would bar "closed shop" agreements in plants handling naval work.

The House naval chairman said he would introduce the bill tomorrow and open hearings on it before the House Naval Committee next week. He said it was not an Administration measure.

Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee, learning of Vinson's proposal, said he has had something of the same sort in mind and declared that he would consult with the naval chairman and other leaders with regard to writing legislation to include all defense work.

Looks to Public Opinion

He said he personally was willing to let the House Naval Committee conduct the hearings on a mediation bill and then perhaps amend it on the floor to include Army contracts as well as naval orders.

The two new labor stoppages involving defense orders were at Elizabeth, N. J., and Cleveland.

Hot Reception Awaits Nazis, Halifax Says

British Would Be 'Very Glad' if Hitler Attacked, He Declares

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Lord Halifax, the new British Ambassador, said yesterday that Britain's military leaders, far from dreading a German invasion of England, "would be very glad to see Hitler try it."

"I can tell you," he said, "that we are very confident that we will give him a good reception."

The British envoy, who has been described as Lincolnesque because of his height, lankiness and gaunt features, talked to newspapermen for nearly an hour in the ballroom of the British Embassy. He turned out to be considerably less solemn than he had been pictured.

In describing the havoc wrought by German bombers on an English town, he told how the gas mains had been broken and pictured the resultant inconvenience to the townspeople.

"They couldn't even make themselves a drop of tea," he said, and his tone implied that this was just about the ultimate in bad luck.

Lord Halifax said that Britain's first war aim was to defeat Hitler, and thereafter work out a peace and a reconstruction that would prevent a recurrence of war.

He said that Hitler was banking heavily on his submarine campaign to defeat Britain, and emphasized Britain's need of ships, as well as warplanes and other equipment.

The day after his arrival on H. M. S. King George V at Annapolis, where he was met by President Roosevelt, Lord Halifax said that Hitler's best chance to invade Eng-

Hull Credits British Success To U. S. Aid

Testifies Five Hours In Senate Hearing On Lend-Lease Bill

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

In an executive session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Secretary Hull testified more than five hours yesterday in behalf of the Administration bill for "all-out" aid to Britain.

The Secretary was reported to have told the committee that American assistance has already proved invaluable to Britain in staving off Nazi attacks, and that the pending measure should be viewed as a matter of self-defense for the United States.

He was said to have stated to the committee members—many of whom were former colleagues of his in the Senate—that the bill would not involve this country in war, but that it would make more effective the program of help to Britain that has long been part of American foreign policy.

Behind the closed doors of the committee room, Secretary Hull reportedly declared that had it not been for the availability of American arms to the British after the retreat from Dunkerque, the Germans might well have chosen that moment to attempt the invasion of England.

Since then, American assistance has been bolstering the British, who now are far stronger than they were at their low point seven months ago, the witness was quoted as saying.

In "Tennessee language" that made up in directness what it lacked in diplomacy, the 69-year-old Secretary devoted much time, it

Unity Sought

By Robert C. Albright.

At least two minor changes in the Administration's lend-lease bill were in prospect last night as President Roosevelt joined Democratic and Republican leaders in a bipartisan "seminar" on the measure.

For the first time, majority and minority spokesmen together reviewed provisions of the bill, section by section, in a White House effort at "understanding."

No agreements were reached or sought at the unique White House conference, but Administration leaders previously were in accord on these two concessions:

A time limitation of from two to two-and-a-half years on the President's powers to administer the law.

Provision for periodic reports by the President to Congress every 60 to 90 days.

"Friendly Discussion"

President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Treasury and State Department legal advisers met with the Congressional leadership delegations as the "all out" aid measure was slated for House action next week.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said it was "a full and free and friendly discussion" of both the bill and amendments, with "no effort to bind anybody."

"The bill was discussed in its entirety, merely for the purpose of clarification," added Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Speaker Rayburn is understood to have arranged the unexpected conference in a unity gesture as the bill neared the House floor.

McNary And Martin Attend

Senate Minority Leader McNary and House Republican Leader Martin joined in the discussion, taking issue with some of the provisions, but making no commitments.

Democrats participating included Barkley, Rayburn, Bloom, House Majority Leader McCormack and Representative Luther Johnson, of Texas, ranking Democratic member

Williams Slated As U. S. Minister To Great Britain

Copyright by The New York Times

S. Clay Williams, chairman of the board of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., is slated to be named the first American minister to Great Britain unless President Roosevelt makes a last minute change, it was reported here yesterday.

Until Williams' name was heard mentioned a few days ago discussion of a possible appointee to the ministerial post had centered around W. Averill Harriman, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific Railroad Co.

The name of the tobacco company executive is likely to be announced by President Roosevelt in a few days coincident with that of John G. Winant for the post of Ambassador to Great Britain.

Year After Investigation

Improvements Still 'on Order' For Aged Home at Blue Plains

Following a series of visits to District welfare institutions by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last year, efforts were announced to improve the management of five agencies. This is the second of a series of articles in which The Post reports what it found during a recent investigation to discover what improvements had been made.

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

As might be expected, the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, which held the spotlight of unfavorable publicity a year ago, has undergone great changes. But it still operates at the old stand, built more than 30 years ago.

Crowding at the home has been reduced, a new hospital ward has been opened, a full-time resident physician has taken charge and has vastly improved the handling of the sick, kitchen odors have been eliminated, the administration building has been renovated, and the WPA is starting the inmates on a program of recreational and vocational pursuits.

"On order" are repairs which will reduce the fire hazards in the dormitories and provide enlarged sanitary quarters, an addition to the kitchen, and more employes. Some of the latter will replace inmates as waiters in the dining room in an effort to avoid the serving of food cold or lukewarm.

The institution still needs furniture and enough money for paint to brighten up the lobbies and the sun parlors.

Lighting is still poor, because the power plant is already overloaded in trying to serve both the Home for the Aged and the adjacent Industrial Home School for Colored Children. Seventy-five-watt bulbs are used where lights of 200 or 250 watts should be used.

The heating plant, which has two second-hand boilers taken from the old Capitol plant, may break down at any time. Welfare officials asked for new boilers, along with other improvements aggregating $165,000, but the commissioners deleted them from the 1942 budget because of the welfare center plan described yesterday.

The hospital, with two wards, is no longer crowded and is fairly well equipped except for furniture. Dr. Joseph Wallace, young resident physician, whose job was a direct outgrowth of last year's inquiries, said he has enough nurses and attendants.

Dr. Wallace has made a diagnosis of every inmate at the home since he started last August. He has cleared out younger men and women who should never have been admitted and has transferred feeble-minded to the District Training School and insane cases to St. Elizabeths Hospital. He has developed a working arrangement with Gallinger Hospital for the treatment of ailments he is not

'More Ramifications'

Jury Inquiry Into Removal Of Secret U. S. Data Continues

United States District Attorney Edward M. Curran disclosed last night that the District grand jury will devote a second session today to investigation of removal of confidential records from Government files.

The move suggested that before the investigation is concluded disclosures may be made which will go far beyond the original revelation of authorities that Federal personnel information has been used for compilation of commercial mailing lists.

The investigation was launched with the disclosure of removal of confidential records from files of the Civil Service Commission. It appeared likely last night that other Government agencies may be involved in the probe.

A high Federal Bureau of Investigation official declared "there are more ramifications in this matter than appear on the surface." He asserted that the Bureau's findings, while not complete, indicated the "serious possibility" that foreign influence was involved and that the case was "not a simple business transaction."

The grand jury spent three hours on the investigation yesterday after a veteran employe of the Civil Service Commission and the son of a deceased official of the Department of Agriculture had confessed to Curran removal of thousands of records covering the national defense aptitudes of Government workers.

Ordinarily, under similar circumstances, the grand jury would have

Senate Passes Air Defense Bill for Fleet

The Senate passed and sent to the White House yesterday a $300,000,000 authorization bill to bolster the fleet against aerial attack.

Normal legislative procedure was suspended as the bill was rushed through by unanimous consent within 45 minutes after the Senate Naval Affairs Committee approved it and other phases of a $1,209,000,000 naval expansion program.

Chairman Walsh also announced he would attempt tomorrow to bring up the remainder of the expansion program—a $909,008,000 bill to authorize 400 small warships and provide additional shipbuilding facilities to speed up the completion of the two-ocean Navy. The bills were approved by the committee after two hours of testimony from Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson and Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong yesterday morning.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt asked Congress to authorize the Maritime Commission to contract for $65,000,000 in additional shipbuilding facilities to speed the completion of its long-range program to build 200 freighters for the Merchant Marine.

This is apart from the emergency program to build 200 cargo ships voted by the House last week. Contracts have been let for 180 ships in the long-range plan at an estimated cost of $446,000,000, while 92 of the vessels have been launched.

During the day the Senate also approved and sent to the President a bill to add 595 midshipmen to the rolls of the Naval Academy. Each member of Congress will be allowed five instead of four appointments to Annapolis under the measure, while the number named each year by the President is increased from 15 to 25 and the total appointed from the Naval Reserve boosted from 50 to 100.

The anti-aircraft bill will strengthen ships of the fleet in the light of lessons of the war, adding rapid-fire "pom-pom" guns to fight off dive bombers, and heavier aerial rifles and armor protection to combat other forms of aircraft threat.

The other bill approved by the committee authorizes 400 sub chasers, patrol boats and ocean-going "escort ships" costing an estimated $400,000,000, and additional shipways and other construction facilities costing $509,000,000.

Conference Held On Lease-Lend Bill

of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations committee was invited, but had a radio address scheduled at the same hour.

George promised "earnest consideration" of three proposed changes in the bill—the time limit, the provision for periodic reports, plus a third amendment specifically banning use of naval vessels to convoy British ships.

At last night's conference the President and his House Democratic leaders were reported to have taken the position that nothing in the bill authorizes the use of convoys, and the President has no intention of ordering their use.

Senator Barkley said there was "casual" discussion of suggestions for a top limit on the British aid authorization, but it was felt "this should be left for future decision of Congress, as the aid appropriations are made."

Republicans were reported to have favored still another amendment preventing the export of any defense articles already purchased by the Army and Navy unless the Army Chief of Staff and the Chief of Naval Operations certified it would not impair the national defense.

The bipartisan conference was arranged as the House Foreign Affairs Committee, on the last lap of ten days of hearings, prepared to get down to specific provisions today and tomorrow.

Under an injunction of strict secrecy, the Chief of Naval Operations, the Army Chief of Staff and the acting chief of the Army Air Corps outlined the military implications of the bill in day-long House testimony. Across the plaza, Senate hearings opened with Secretary of State Hull on the stand.

Administration spokesmen were represented as anxious to give every consideration to "constructive" amendments, but were determined not to allow any that would strike at the heart of the measure, namely, full aid to Britain.

A unified leadership move to expedite the legislation, now two weeks in the mill, meanwhile was in progress.

The House Democratic Steering Committee, charged with guiding the House program, reorganized for the session and elected a new chairman, Representative Clarence Cannon, of Missouri.

With Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack present, the steering group immediately considered lend-lease bill strategy.

Members were reported in general agreement that in the interest of unity, full consideration should be given to modifying proposals provided that the "all out" aid objectives were left unimpaired.

Tentative plans for speeding the bill call for a report by the House Foreign Affairs Committee by Thursday or Friday, and a House Rules Committee meeting the following day.

Chairman Adolph Sabath of the House Rules Committee said he favored a "broad, liberal rule," but added:

"If there is any evidence of an effort to delay the legislation, I will urge a closed rule with a limitation on the number of amendments that can be offered."

Sabath said he thought "two or three days" would be sufficient for House general debate, before amendments to the bill are taken up.

Speaker Rayburn said he thought in no event should the House spend longer than a week on the measure.

Testifying in closed session before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Admiral Harold Stark, chief of naval operations; Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, acting chief of the Air Corps, all favored the pending bill. Committeemen adhered strictly to their self-imposed rule not to disclose the confidential military information given them by the three.

Lend-Lease Bill Is Attacked By Patriotic Society Coalition

The lend-lease bill was condemned by the American Coalition of Patriotic Societies yesterday as "dictatorial and unconstitutional."

The coalition urged defeat of the measure after hearing Senator Burton Wheeler, Congressional isolationist leader, charge that the bill would destroy "representative government" and give the President power to "wage undeclared war in defense of foreign powers."

Wheeler spoke to the group's annual convention at the Carlton Hotel. His speech was warmly applauded by the 300 delegates.

The American Coalition, according to its letterhead, is "an organization to coordinate the efforts of patriotic, civic and fraternal societies to keep America American."

It contains about 100 "cooperating societies," including the American War Mothers, the Colonial Dames of America, the General Society of Mayflower Descendants, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Eugenics Society of Northern California and the Minute Men of America.

Coalition Favors Aid

The resolution attacking the lend-lease bill favored the extension of "all appropriate aid to nations which the American people desire to serve," but it declared that H. R. 1776 would "create totalitarianism at home under the plea of combating totalitarianism abroad."

Wheeler declared that "this bill is not synonymous with aid to Britain."

"If you taxpayers want to give five billions or fifty billion dollars of your money to Great Britain, to China, to Greece, to Russia, and to any other nation the President may designate—that is your privilege. But I beg of you, do not demand the abdication of Congress.

Wheeler's address was carried over a coast-to-coast radio hookup, as was that of Senator Willis (Republican), of Indiana, who preceded him.

Willis Hits Hull Policy

Willis attacked the Hull reciprocal trade policy and said the United States must prepare for a postwar world of self-sufficient nations and blocs of nations.

The convention adopted a series of resolutions on defense which urged (a) that aliens and persons "associated with un-American and subversive activities" be prohibited employment in defense industries, (b) that naturalization laws be suspended for two years and revised to exclude persons promoting "alien political philosophies" from citizenship, (c) that the Dies Committee be continued, and (d) that subversive youth movements in the schools and colleges be eradicated.

At the convention's morning session the delegates heard Maj. Augustin G. Rudd, of New York, charge that subversive elements in education had erected a structure "so powerful and well organized that its tentacles reach into class rooms from coast to coast."

Women Patriots Hear N. A. M. Head

Walter D. Fuller, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, declared last night that "industry will meet or beat specified delivery dates" on 93 per cent of the Nation's defense contracts.

He disclosed the result of a survey of hundreds of manufacturers in a speech to the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense at the Mayflower Hotel.

Earlier, Milo J. Warner, national commander of the American Legion, told the conference he would head an Administration-approved Legion mission to England next month to study civilian defense measures.

Fuller declared "American industry will do what it took Germany six years to do, what England has not yet completed in four—we will make America supreme on land, on sea, and in the air, and we will do it far better and quicker than any foreign nation ever dreamed we could."

Warner said his companions on the trip to Britain will be Maj. Frank Parker, U. S. Army retired, and former National Legion Commander Franklin D'Olier.

"We go to this task as representatives of a civilian organization attempting to determine how best we can direct our further efforts for civilian defense in the spirit of the greatest good for the greatest number," he said.

Britain Is Ready, Halifax Declares

land was immediately after the fall of France in June.

"Do you think Hitler will try to invade England now?" he was asked yesterday.

"I am always trying to look at it from Hitler's point of view," he said. "I can imagine him being advised by his experts that it would be a difficult undertaking unless he first knocked the British out of the air. He hasn't done that, and he won't do it.

"On the other side, I can imagine Hitler thinking about the difficulties if he doesn't try an invasion. I can tell you that on our side we are very confident that we will give him a good reception.

"I think those people who know most about it would be very glad to see him try it."

"Do you mean your military people?"

"Yes."

He said that the effect of the Nazi bombing of England after the fall of France was felt all over England, and was "like an electric shock to our morale." As a result of the rout in Flanders and the flight from Dunkerque, he said, Britain was very short on fighting material, but lost no time in making up for the losses.

Earlier in the day, when he called on Vice President Henry Wallace and Speaker Sam Rayburn at the Capitol, Lord Halifax said that the United States provided "a lot of equipment" that was needed after Dunkerque.

"Why hasn't Great Britain outlined her war aims?" he was asked at the embassy conference.

"Mainly, I think, because we thought our first aim was to win the war," he replied. "If we didn't win, any talk about our aims would be merely academic. The other side's aims would prevail.

"I may get an opportunity to say something on this subject in public. However, in a sentence, I would say that our first aim is to win the war, and then so construct the peace that there would not be another war. All countries will have to help nurse the world back to health after the war is over."

He said that Britain—at least when he left London—had no secret treaties for territorial distribution after the war. Earlier in the day, Senators Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, had introduced a resolution calling on the belligerents to make known their war aims, and also to disclose whether there were any "secret treaties for the division of territorial spoils."

Lord Halifax was reminded that some people who had returned from England had said that democracy would disappear over there, regardless of the outcome of the war.

"I don't think the British people would be fighting as they are unless they thought it was for democracy," he said.

This led him to recall a talk he had with Adolf Hitler in 1937. He said that Hitler began by saying that there was not much that could be done to improve Anglo-German relations so long as the British Parliament and press were free to criticize the Nazi state.

"I remember telling him," Lord Halifax continued, "that I was wasting his time and he was wasting mine, if that was the way he felt about it." That interchange was typical of the British reaction to any suggestion that democracy be suppressed. "It was true then, it is true today, and it will be true tomorrow."

Asked About Churchill Speech

Lord Halifax was asked about a recent speech by Winston Churchill, in which the British prime minister said that Britain would not require any men from America "in 1941." This speech, the Ambassador was told, was widely interpreted as meaning that Britain would expect American troops in 1942 or thereafter.

Lord Halifax expressed the opinion that Churchill was talking about a situation as far as he could foresee it, and had nothing else in mind.

"He chose his words carefully," Halifax said, "and I don't think any such inference as you mention could be drawn from them."

The tall Yorkshireman, asked what Britain needed most from the United States, said Britain doubtless could make good use of all the help the United States was disposed to give, and he mentioned ships, aircraft and other equipment.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that one of the things that Hitler is banking on to win the war is his submarine campaign."

Lord Halifax, after expressing thanks for the reception given him by President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and others here, said that Great Britain—all her parties, all her people—was united as never before, all "in the front line together." The British people, he said, certainly were not downhearted.

"It is for you to form your own opinion as to what we are standing up against," he said, "and make up your own minds as to what you think you would like to do in the way of helping us."

In his visit to Capitol Hill, Lord Halifax first called on Vice President Wallace. It developed that Wallace's ancestors also were Yorkshire people, having come from Monk Bretton, where Halifax owns property.

Leaving Wallace, the ambassador walked over to the House side and called on Speaker Rayburn and Representatives McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, the majority and minority leaders.

Speaker Rayburn said he was especially impressed because Lord Halifax, instead of putting on "a baby act," confined his talk to the warm reception Hitler would get if he invaded England.

was said, to an outline of the Far Eastern situation, with emphasis on the expansive force of Japanese imperialism.

Anglo-French Relations Topic

Some committee members asserted after the all-day session that the bulk of Secretary Hull's testimony dealt with material that has already been under full public discussion. Principal items of truly "confidential" information, one Senator said, concerned the relations between certain European powers including England and France, but did not directly touch upon the pending bill.

The Secretary was said by some Senators in sympathy with the bill to have answered "every question;" but others in opposition protested that he "shied away" from queries as to exactly how the bill would operate if enacted into law. "Very evasive" was the term applied by one Senator.

It is understood that the Secretary told the committee that passage of the measure would bolster morale in the Balkans, that Turkey appeared to be determined to oppose Axis aggression, that Japan's expansionist program includes seizure of Indo-China.

Would Keep War From U. S.

The Secretary was represented as indicating that the bill would help Britain keep war away from the United States, but he reportedly declared that the Administration did not intend to use naval vessels to convoy merchant ships to the British Isles.

After giving two hours' testimony in the morning, Secretary Hull, who is suffering from a heavy cold, reappeared after the luncheon recess for three more hours in the afternoon. At the end of the day, he thanked Chairman George of the Foreign Relations Committee for his "courtesy and hospitality," but intimated that he was considerably fatigued by the lengthy ordeal.

At the opening of yesterday's testimony, Secretary Hull said that publication of some of the information he had for the committee "might be injurious to the national safety." Consequently, it was decided to hold the session in camera.

Secretary Morgenthau will testify in favor of the bill today, in public session.

Meanwhile, Senators Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, introduced their resolution asking the belligerent European nations to state their war aims, and reveal the terms of any "secret treaties" for division of "territorial spoils."

Drastic Act Strengthens Petain's Hold

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Jan. 27.—By a constitutional act making all ministers, dignitaries and high public officials responsible to him for all their acts Marshal Petain tonight forestalled any possible recurrence of the controversy arising from his dismissal of Pierre Laval.

The act goes even further and permits the chief of state to take direct action against Laval or any other ministers of state for the last ten years who are found to have failed in their duties and to confine them if necessary, in a fortified citadel.

It permits him to keep such persons as former Premiers Leon Blum, Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud in detention as long as he may be required and to mete out similar punishment to any minister who fails in his duties to the chief of state.

The law is so drastic that it will prevent any former official from setting himself up in contravention of the marshal's wishes in a part of France occupied or unoccupied, and allows him to bring to book any former officials for acts he may have committed years before Marshal Petain and the new regime came into power.

The act places Marshal Petain in a strong position to face any demands that may be made upon him when and if Count Fernand de Brinon ever comes to Vichy with new proposals. His cabinet by then will hardly be in a way to oppose whatever decision the marshal makes, and it is reported that it may even be a different cabinet from that which is known to Vichy today.

"The regime of irresponsibility is at an end," says the prologue to the new constitutional act, "political power ceases to be a bauble that may be passed from hand to hand but makes responsibility effective, engaging the man who accepts it to the extent of his liberty, his property and his life."

Henceforth all ministers and high officials will be obliged to swear an oath of fidelity to the marshal, and as they hold their places only at his will they will be subject not only to dismissal but to punishment at his orders—a fact that will not relieve them from prosecution in the regular courts to which their acts may lay them open.

2 Resign From Cabinet

Vichy, Jan. 27 (U.P.).—An end of the month-old stalemate in relations between Adolf Hitler and the French government appeared imminent tonight after a new shakeup in Marshal Petain's cabinet and reports that a message from Hitler is en route to Vichy.

Minister of Justice Raphael Alibert and Minister of Labor Rene Belin resigned from the cabinet today, following bitter accusations in Nazi-held Paris that they have been blocking French-German collaboration.

Count Fernand de Brinon, Marshal Petain's envoy to Paris and a close friend of Pierre Laval, was revealed to have returned to Paris after a visit to Berlin, where he obtained Hitler's reply to Marshal Petain's Christmas-time proposals for future collaboration.

Vinson Plans Bill To Curb Strikes

Dodge Copper Products Corporation plant at Elizabeth, halting work on a $74,323 order. Union officials were quoted by the Associated Press as stating they were demanding an immediate collective bargaining election.

The Standard Tool Co., of Cleveland, it was said, was closed when the C. I. O. United Auto Workers Union called a strike after contract negotiations with the management became deadlocked. The company makes factory equipment for many defense plants.

In East Moline, Ill., employes at the International Harvester Co., which has been shut down since January 16 because of a labor dispute, prepared to return to work tomorrow. Members of both an independent and a C. I. O. union voted to return to their jobs and submit demands to the company.

A three-week strike at the Babcock & Wilcox plant at Bayonne, N. J., makers of marine boilers, was settled over the weekend, and members of the C. I. O. union returned to their jobs. The dispute was over a demand for higher wages.

Chairman Vinson said that his bill, like the Railway Labor Act, would provide three months during which strikes would be barred. During this time, the naval board would first try to settle the dispute by mediation, which would be compulsory, and then arbitration if necessary.

The terms proposed by the board of arbitration could be refused by either side, and a strike could be called after the three months "cooling off" period.

"Public opinion, however, should take care of that," Vinson said, and added, "The situation demands cooperation in national defense work. Nothing should be allowed to interfere, neither the efforts of employers nor those of employes, with the great objective of getting the defense program going."

The proviso, barring "closed shop" agreement in shops having naval defense work, it was indicated, will be along the lines of an amendment which Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, sought to add to an appropriation bill last week, prohibiting such contracts in shipyards.

Smith said it was designed to stop "fee rackets" by some labor unions, under which "exorbitant" initiation fees are charged men seeking jobs on defense projects.

RAF Squadron BombsHanover

By David Anderson
Copyright by New York Times

London (Tuesday), Jan. 28.—A small compact squadron of Royal Air Force bombers carried out a successful attack on the industrial area of Hanover some time between late Sunday night and early yesterday morning.

It was the twenty-eighth raid on this important rail junction and was accomplished without loss.

Two months have passed since Hanover's oil refineries and its concentration of railroads, linking Berlin, Cologne, Hamburg and Frankfort-on-the-Main have been bombed. The weather has been so bad on the continent that only two other sorties to Germany have been made by the R. A. F. in January—the targets on these occasions being Wilhelmshaven and Dusseldorf.

While British pilots were dropping incendiaries and high explosives on the Reich, London entered her second raid-free week, which is the longest period in which the sirens have remained mute since September's blitzkrieg.

In other parts of Britain there was sporadic enemy air activity yesterday. A town in the northeast announced that a German plane had machine-gunned the populace. In succession warnings were sounded in communities in the East Midlands, the east coast and Scotland. At one place several bombs fell, killing a number of people.

A single Junkers-88 was brought down by antiaircraft crews a little later and officials deduced that it was the cause of all the commotion.

Relief was felt in London yesterday when workmen wrenched open a strong box dug out of the ruins of the Guildhall to find that historical records and silver plate had survived the fire which brought ruin to so much of the old city four weeks ago. The lord mayor found maces, cups, flagons and the rest of the regalia, some of it dating back 400 years, intact. The articles were in his safe which crashed from the top floor to the ground. The relics were damaged, but can be repaired.

Speculation on the air war now current stresses the point that the present lull is in no way mysterious. The argument that the weather has made air raids of questionable value is given general support.

Rumania Ousts Iron Guards From Cabinet

By Frank E. Stevens.
United Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Jan. 27.—Premier Antonescu today set up a new military regime for strife-torn Rumania and, from a sickbed, ordered sweeping reprisals that may send hundreds of Iron Guard rebels to death before army firing squads.

Antonescu was confined to his home by doctors' orders, suffering from "fatigue" after crushing last week's bloody rebellion, as his new government was announced and drastic measures were taken to crush remnants of Iron Guard resistance and disarm the nation.

Every Iron Guard follower of Horia Sima who bore arms in the revolt faces a death sentence and all other participants will be sent to prison, it was understood.

An official communique tonight provided the death penalty for all persons possessing hidden machine-guns unless the weapons are surrendered within 24 hours.

At the same time Antonescu tightened still more his military dictatorship by bringing 52 additional private industries under army control, including the great Malaxa chain of arms and munitions plants. Eighty-seven industries had been militarized on Friday.

The new cabinet, stripped of every semblance of Iron Guard participation, is composed entirely of military and naval leaders with exception of the posts of justice and propaganda. Antonescu is both premier and foreign minister.

Tension still ran high in Bucharest, as a state funeral was held for 2 officers and 15 soldiers slain in the uprising. There were reports that Sima had succeeded in fleeing from the country, although the government had announced his arrest.

Troops patrolled the frontiers to prevent the Iron Guard rebels from escaping the country. Army detachments patrolled Bucharest, demanding identification papers of all persons and halting automobiles and buses.

House-to-house search for hidden rebels and evidence of participation in the revolt was under way.

Simultaneous with the naming of the new cabinet, Antonescu named Gen. Radu Gherghe prefect of the Bucharest police, a powerful post under the ministry of interior.

Antonescu's new cabinet:

Justice—George P. Docan, nonparty man and counsellor of the Rumanian high court.

Propaganda—Prof. Nichifor Crainic, professor of theology at Bucharest University and a rightist, although never active in politics except as minister of propaganda once before.

Interior—Gen. Demitru Popescu, whose appointment last week was partly responsible for the rebellion.

Education—Radu Rosetti.

Finance—Brig. Gen. Nicholas Stoenescu.

Economy—Brig. Gen. George Potopeanu.

Agriculture—Army corps. Gen. Ion Sichitiu.

Labor and health—Prof. P. Tomescu, member of the faculty of medicine at Bucharest University.

Without portfolio—Prof. Mihai Natonescu, minister of justice in the former cabinet.

Gen. Eugen Zweideneck, former aide de camp to the late Queen Marie, was named undersecretary of the department of national economy for colonization and evacuees, a new government post. The undersecretaries for air, navy and army remained unchanged.

Italians Ridicule Reports of Disorder

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Jan. 27.—The press today ridicules British reports of grave disorders in Turin and Milan. A Stefani News Agency communique prints some of the reports broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation yesterday and explains that it does so "in order to acquaint the Milanese and Turinese of what is happening in their respective cities."

Responsible Italian circles also denied that disorders had taken place and invited foreign correspondents in Rome to phone to their correspondents in Milan and Turin to check on the situation.

"It is ridiculous to suppose that German troops, though they be of an allied country, have been called to quell disorders in Italy—which had not taken place, anyway," it was said. "This statement is an index of the tendentiousness and cunning of enemy propaganda."

Nazis Reported In Control Of Milan, Turin

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 27.—The German army has assumed complete control tonight of all censorship and all communications in Milan and Turin, where German soldiers and secret police have suppressed, at least mometnarily, rioting and demonstrations, it was learned here from foreign military sources and from Rakek on the Yugoslav-Italian frontier.

Arrests of officers identified as "suspect officers and Blackshirts" and certain workers in Turin and Milan factories are still going on, this correspondent was informed.

Casualties at Turin, Milan and elsewhere are reported as "numerous," but it is still impossible to ascertain the exact number. The original report of the shooting of thee Italian Blackshirt officers identified as "generals," has been confirmed to this correspondent by diplomatic and military sources. The officers, according to these sources, were shot down by German soldiers at Milan.

From Rakek tonight additional details were obtained on the situation in northern Italy, including information from Italian sources of other disturbances in recent days at Trieste. These sources reported a breadline riot in Trieste on the morning of January 18, during which 20 women were arrested as "defeatists."

The women, it is reported, were released early on the morning of January 19, after they were forced to swallow castor oil administered by Blackshirt secret police. Fighting in the barracks of the Trieste Blackshirt regiment between the officers and men on January 16 is also reported, after which more than a score of soldiers are said to have been "removed" for punishment.

Wholesale arrests were conducted in northern Italy, it is learned, during the period of January 21 to 24, when night after night printed stickers were affixed to the official posters of Premier Mussolini, depicted wearing an Italian steel helmet.

The stickers, several of which are on view at Rakek, bear the message, "Why don't you destroy yourself?"

Other stickers and posters are circulating in abundance in northern industrial Italy. One of them among the thousands distributed shortly before the Milan demonstrations started, bore the declaration, "Abasso Germania" (down with Germany). Another leaflet contains the message, "Italian people: Stand Fast. Emmanuel and Badoglio will be your deliverers."

Cheers Greet Nazis In Italy, Say Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 27 (AP).—German troops passing through Milan en route to southern Italy were reported today to have been heartily cheered yesterday by the Italian population.

Rumors of an uprising in Milan and Turin were categorically denied, meanwhile, in German government quarters. It was stated that no German troops whatever are in Turin.

German authorities profess to know nothing about troops other than air force detachments having gone to Italy. Asked what the reference to the passage of troops through Milan meant, they said:

"It is natural that once the air force has been assigned to a certain task in a certain place, all sorts of reinforcements and replacements must be sent from time to time."

Greeks Say Daring Fliers Must Be Nazis

By J. Wes Gallagher.
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Greek army in Albania, Jan. 27.—The appearance of German-type warplanes and a marked change in air tactics since the first of the year caused Greek officers today to speculate on whether Italian pilots are doing all the bombing against the Greeks on this front.

"I don't think those planes are being flown by Italians," said one commander. "I never have seen Italian planes operated as these planes are being flown in the past few days. These pilots take great risks."

Ships resembling new German Junker types have been sweeping to within 200 feet of the ground to bomb and machine-gun roads over which the Greek army has been advancing.

This practice is not general, but is confined to single flights. In a steady 6-hour strafing and bombing during recent battles one flight of planes did the low-flying topped by many others flying several thousand feet above the jagged mountains.

As the Germans flew in Norway, so did this lower flight. The planes wound through the gorges, dipping to less than 200 feet from the ground to bomb and machine gun Greek positions in Klisura Valley.

During the first two months of the war the Italians dropped only a few sticks of bombs in raiding Albanian villages. However, in the last few days whole flights of Italian bombers attacked small villages and attempted to wipe them out completely.

In some cases scarcely a stone is left standing in some of these mountain hamlets, and the entire population has fled to the mountains.

For the first time during the war dive-bombers, which were used so effectively in France by the Germans, made their appearance over a Greek city recently, scoring two direct hits on a causeway with two 1,000-pound bombs which are larger than anything the Italians had been using.

This growing air opposition is causing Greek anxiety for their spring attack plans since it is a foretaste of what may be expected when winter weather lifts. Thus far the snow and cold have both hampered and aided the Greeks, slowing their ground advance, but also restricting Italian aerial activity.

In many cases the obvious Italian advantage in the air has caused Greek infantry to halt at noon, dig in and wait for darkness before resuming.

Attack Repulsed

By the Associated Press

Athens, Jan. 27. — Reinforced Italian infantrymen fighting north of Klisura, Albania, counterattacked with the aid of tanks, but again were thrown back with severe losses, a Greek government spokesman said tonight. The Fascists attacked repeatedly, trying to dominate strategic heights.

"Our army again gained ground, mopping up the terrain where the Italians left many dead and wounded, and taking 147 prisoners," the spokesman said.

days. By driving into the desert, Italian military experts said, the British weakened their offensive position by sacrificing support of the Royal Navy.

Italian troops were said to have inflicted considerable losses on British armored forces in lively fihting.

Fighting continues on the Eritrean front, the communique said.

On the Kenya front an Italian detachment was said to have inflicted considerable losses on a British column taken by surprise.

The communique said nothing of great importance was occurring on the Albanian fronts.

Giuseppe Tassinari, minister of agriculture and food czar, decreed today that effective February 1 no spaghetti, rice or other rationed food will be served in restaurants except upon presentation of a ration card. As a concession, however, these foods will be served in restaurants every day instead of five days a week, as formerly.

Graziani Reported Ousted

London, Jan. 27 (INS).—The Turkish radio was quoted by Reuter's (British) News Agency tonight as stating that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani had been relieved by Premier Mussolini of his command as chief of all Italian armies in Africa.

A Reuter's dispatch from Ankara said the radio station there reported Graziani was replaced by Gen. Bardi.

Willkie Starts Hunt for Facts

mer Josiah Stamp, who is chief economic adviser to the war cabinet.

In the forenoon Willkie visited Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and in the afternoon called on Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin. Tonight he failed to see London under fire because the night skies were clear of planes.

The traveler also found time to grant interviews to reporters representing newspapers and news agencies in many parts of the world.

In contrast to his replies Sunday evening when he smilingly declined to answer questions because he had not seen enough yet to make up his mind, Willkie shot back a quick reply today when asked what he thought about the British people in war time so far as he had seen.

"During the few hours I have been here," he said, "I have found their spirit magnificent. I like their nerve. I haven't met anybody so far who is downhearted but I didn't expect anything else."

The American appeared to be deeply impressed when he left 10 Downing Street after lunching with Churchill. Asked what he thought of the Premier, he said with unmistakable sincerity, "Mister Churchill is a most unusual man." The two talked for an hour and three-quarters about the international situation, most recent war developments, and British-American relations, but in accordance with the established custom when a visitor meets a government head, Willkie did not go into details of the conversation.

Hopkins paid a courtesy call at Willkie's hotel this evening. Neither had met before although as Willkie explained jovially to British reporters earlier in the day he had "heard of "President Roosevelt's personal envoy.

Emerging from his hotel this morning Willkie eagerly asked questions of a traffic policeman about how the latter was getting along. Then seeing an army private strolling along a sidewalk with his arm in a sling Willkie got him into conversation by asking how he got hurt, how he was feeling, and how everything was going. The surprised soldier, who was not quite sure about the identity of the stranger with an American accent, grinned cheerfully and with the typical British gift for understatement, said everything was going "not too bad, sir."

After a brief chat Willkie climbed into a United States Embassy car and drove to the ministry of information where he met a large gathering of newspapermen. He told them to "shoot their questions" and, "shoot them fast." His face was alight as he spoke—and the British reporters were so captivated they described his smile as "magnificent."

Willkie explained once more that he had come to Britain to get all the information he could, to talk to as many officials and men in the street as he could in a private effort to understand what the people were thinking about, and what conditions were like.

"I want to go to Manchester and want to see all the other industrial centers. Indeed, I want to find out all I can about English methods of production so I can make up my mind as to how far they can be coordinated with American production. I want to find out where your shortages are and where we can make them up, whether your methods are better than ours and if so to get them put into operation quickly, and if some of our methods are better than yours, then you can improve in that direction," he said.

Willkie said further that he hoped not only to talk with Britishers representing all walks of life but also with the heads of "all the democracies in Europe that are here," as well as with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the "free French." He added that he wants to go to Ireland to talk with Premier Eamon de Valera whom he does not know and to whom he does not have any letter of introduction.

Willkie declined to discuss American internal affairs with newspapermen. He replied to all such questions, "I am here in another country. Although I opposed the President in the last campaign he is my President and he is the representative head of my Government."

Interested in Eire Visit

London (Tuesday), Jan. 27 (INS).—London circles and the British press early today manifested the hope that Wendell L. Willkie on his trip to Dublin next week will be able to persuade Eire's Premier Eamon de Valera to grant Britain the use of Irish ports to help combat the Geman blockade menace.

StarvationNear In Belgium, Hoover Says

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 27.—Former President Hoover declared tonight that Belgium faces "literal starvation" within a month unless adequate food supplies are dispatched to that nation quickly.

He based his declaration on a cable report received from three special investigators of his national committee on food for the small democracies who have been studying food conditions in Belgium.

"One thing is plain," Hoover said in revealing the report. "Major food supplies will be nonexistent in a month. This means literal starvation—unless supplies are brought in from somewhere."

Hoover's investigators in Belgium are Dorsey Stephens, William McDonald and C. P. Murray. They were detailed to the German-conquered nation on January 9 as experts in large-scale famine relief, Hoover said.

Hoover asserted that many foods, such as beans and peas, are practically exhausted now, with many others, including breadstuff supplies, in danger of exhaustion before February 15.

"The present theoretical daily ration for each person (in Belgium)," Hoover explained, "consists of about one-half pound of bread, 2 ounces of fats and meats, 1½ ounces of sugar, about 1 1-10 pounds of potatoes and half an ounce of beans and peas.

"The total food value of this ration is about one-half of the ration in England and Germany. This ration, however, is no longer effective since only 60 per cent of meats and fats, 20 per cent of potatoes, are distributed. Consequently, today's actual ration is not much more than one-third of that in Britain or Germany."

Hogs have been reduced from 1,100,000 to about 260,000, Hoover added, and "inroads have been made upon dairy herds and breeding cattle." An attempt is being made, he continued, to maintain milk rations for children by prohibiting butter making.

"Our commission cables 'situation is serious. Outside help urgently needed.'" Hoover said. "My interpretation of this report is that no population could survive even if the outlined theoretical per person ration could be maintained—and this ration is not available."

Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador, said yesterday he was seeking "the maximum of relief supplies from the United States.

At the State Department he indicated to newsmen that he was enlarging his plea for assistance to include all types of food supplies as compared with previous appeals chiefly confined to vitamin products and medicines. Food conditions in unoccupied France are growing more serious, he said.

British Troops Advance on 4 African Fronts

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Jan. 27.—British troops advanced on all four fronts in Africa today—in Libya, Eritrea, Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland—but the most important gains were made around Agordat in Eritrea, where positions near Biscia fell yesterday to the British.

In Eritrea, the British are on the verge of capturing two important mountain towns: Agordat, on the Massawa Railway, and Barentu, about 40 miles south. The number of prisoners captured in Eritrea has reached 1,100.

The Italians are also withdrawing from Um Hagar, an Eritrean outpost 80 miles south of Kassala near the border, and are following the valley formed by the Seti River.

Agordat is on an elevation of some 2,000 feet. In peacetime it is a cattle and grain market.

From Agordat southward, toward Barentu, there are undulating plains covered with sparse scrub, through which British tanks charge in pursuit of Italian native troops.

British airmen are continually harassing the Italians. A Rhodesian squadron yesterday strafed trucks in Barentu.

British patrols are consolidating their positions outside of Derna in Libya, while heavier forces move up. However, no effort is being made to capture the place immediately, and movement there is possibly awaiting the success of other operations.

The Royal Air Force again bombed the Libyan airdrome at Barce, damaging hangars and grounded warplanes as well as smashing the adjacent buildings. The airdrome on the outskirts of Derna was also raided.

British fighters patroling Cynraenica fought several dogfights yesterday, shooting down five Italian warplanes. Three Fiats were downed near Mechilli, in Libya, and two G-50 monoplanes were caught attacking British troops near Derna and sent flaming to the earth.

Near Mechili, which is important because it is on the southern route to Bengasi and may serve the advancing British, the R. A. F. destroyed a Savoia bomber on the ground. During the air fighting one British fighter apparently was lost as it has not returned to its base.

Guerrilla raids by patriots continued in Ethiopia.

British patrols daily plunge deeper into Italian Somaliland and into Ethiopia from Kenya.

British army spokesmen say that practically no Italians are remaining in Kenya, where once a large area was under the domination of Il Duce's patrols.

Prisoners taken at Tobruk are now estimated to number 25,000. The enumeration of equipment taken is proceeding. The latest figures are 22 medium tanks and 23 light tanks.

Ship Bearing Vaccine Sunk

By Howard W. Blakeslee.
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Jan. 27.—A German submarine has sunk a ship carrying 500,000 doses of the new American flu vaccine to England, says the American Medical Association News.

The date and name of the ship were not given. The shipments of this new hope for stopping influenza have been kept secret.

Although there was reason to believe that the half million doses were not the major part of the shipments, the News regarded the loss as a major medical disaster. It quoted the official journal, Hygeia, of the American Medical Association, as saying:

"Thus war struck in an indirect manner at one of the great investigations of modern science, that might have brought increased freedom from disease to millions and millions of people."

The vaccine is the new stuff discovered in one of the most dramatic medical "accidents" on record at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research here.

A few ferrets got distemper. Ferrets, which have both flu and distemper, were in use as guinea pigs in the search for a flu vaccine.

The new vaccine proved "stable" and worked when tried on human volunteers.

Pardon us while we change our name

WE'VE been the Sanitary folks for more years than you probably remember. Sanitary Stores are part of this community—a welcome part, many people have been kind enough to tell us.

This week we're exactly the same family of grocers as we've always been except that we have a new name . . . which looks like this:

SAFEWAY

This new name is the name of the parent organization to which Sanitary Stores have long belonged. The chief reason for changing our name to SAFEWAY is to simplify our business records.

Only our name is changed—nothing else at all. Same ownership. Same store locations. We still offer you the same fine foods, farm-fresh produce and guaranteed meats.

And because our stores continue to be chain stores, distributing foods directly, we still can offer you definite money-savings every day.

You'll see our new name now on the front of our stores. And you'll see it in our regular food advertisement in the newspapers this weekend.

We hope you get used to our new name without inconvenience. And that it quickly comes to be the same friendly kind of "buy-word" our old name has been.

Your SANITARY Grocer . . . who from now on is your SAFEWAY Grocer

Congress Passes Bill for 5 D. C. Midshipmen

Chariman Walsh, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, promised his support yesterday to the efforts of the District Commissioners to obtain a larger quota of appointees to the Naval Academy as the Senate acted to increase the present allowance from four to five.

The Senate by unanimous consent approved a House bill removinug a limitation on appropriations for midshipmen's pay. The bill also would raise the quota of appointees for each member of Congress from four to five. The same privilege would be permitted to the commissioners.

Senator Walsh, in answer to an inquiry from Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, said that he favors an increase in the District's quota of midshipmen and declared that appointments should be restricted to bona fide District residents.

Sons of Army and Navy officers stationed in Washington, Walsh explained, are appointed to the academy by the President.

The Senator recalled that the Senate Naval Affairs Committee several years ago reported favorably a bill increasing the District's midshipmen quota to 12.

"For some reason District authorities didn't want an amendment limiting appointments to District residents," Walsh commented. "The boys living here ought to have a chance."

The commissioners have announced that they intend to send to Congress shortly legislation proposing an increase in the District quota of both midshipmen and cadet appointments.

completed its work on the case within an hour, it was pointed out.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, it was understood, will testify before the jury today. The FBI has been at work for 48 hours on the case which is replete with suggestions that information available in the records could have been used—if it had not actually been so used—by espionage agents of a foreign government.

Personnel Lists Reported Sold

The records removed were those of the Civil Service Commission. The commission, which first learned of their removal through newspaper disclosure, announced late yesterday suspension of Harlan W. Crandall, 29, of 45 Todd Place Northeast, a commission employe, who, the FBI charged, had sold confidential personnel lists.

Arrested with Crandall was Lawrence L. Haynes, 30, of 403 D Street Northeast, son of the late Lynford J. Haynes, former chief of the publications division of the Department of Agriculture. Haynes, associated with his father in the Standard Business Service, a concern that sold mailing lists of prospects to industrial firms, has a criminal record dating back to 1928, the FBI reported.

Curran and the FBI declined to ndicate the trend of their investigations or to explain why a second Grand Jury session has been called. It was apparent, nevertheless, that neither Crandall nor Haynes had intended to make valuable information available to a foreign power. On the contrary, their activities were made known apparently after they realized they might unwittingly be of assistance to foreign agents.

Was in Charge of Control Desk

Crandall was on the rolls of the Civil Service Commission as a $1,620-a-year assistant clerk. Until three days ago he had been in charge of the control desk in the room where the files were kept. His duties were to check the records in and out of the file room, a task that made simple their removal.

Crandall entered the commission's service ten years ago as a messenger. During most of his career he worked in the certification division. Last July, however, he requested a transfer and was assigned duties associated with the personnel records. A week ago he requested a second transfer. The request was approved three days ago.

Crandall is married and his mother lives with him and his wife. Neighbors said Crandall's son, about 7, had been in ill health.

The FBI account of Haynes' background follows:

"Lawrence L. Haynes has a long record of criminal activities dating back to 1928, when he was sentenced to serve a 90-day term in the D. C. Asylum and Jail for grand larceny. Since then he has been convicted on numerous occasions and sentenced to serve either jail or prison terms for passing bad checks, larceny by trick, obtaining money under false pretenses and embezzlement. On January 20, 1940, he received a one-year suspended sentence for obtaining money under false pretenses following his arrest at Bayonne, N. J., and on March 8, 1940, received a six months' sentence for embezzlement and was committed to the D. C. Jail."

When Haynes was brought before Curran, he was recognized at once.

"I've seen you somewhere before," said Curran, a former police judge. "Have you ever been before me?"

"I think so," Haynes replied. "You sentenced me last March."

Curran said the Grand Jury would be asked for indictment of Crandall and Hayes under two sections of the United States code. The first covers theft of Government property and the second removal or mutilation of public records. Conviction under both carries a maximum of $7,000 in fines and eight years in prison.

The pair was returned to the First Precinct Station last night after the Grand Jury session

In the courthouse yesterday in connection with the case were two naturalized German-Americans. They are Walter Camp, 36, and Werner Orbach, 33, who are associated in a food concern here. Camp was a witness before the Grand Jury. Orbach is expected to testify today.

Camp told The Post last night that he and Orbach had nothing to do with obtaining personnel files from the Civil Service Commission. He said that he and Orbach had advanced $3,000 from July to October, 1940, to Haynes' father to cover expenses of compiling a list of 300,000 motorboat owners in the United States. The father died last week.

The names were obtained, Camp disclosed, from files in the Department of Commerce and with written authority of a department official.

Haynes' father was identified by Camp as a close friend of Vice President Wallace. The elder Haynes, he said, had been employed on a farm paper formerly published by Wallace's father, the late Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace.

Camp stated that use of civil service records was undertaken by Crandall and Haynes without his consent or approval and that when he learned the records had been removed he urged their return. He said he and Orbach had informed the FBI that the records were being removed.

In Business Several Years

"I have a home, two children and a fine business and I feel that I am being unfairly treated simply because I happened to leave Germany 15 years ago and chose to live in this country," Camp said.

Camp lives at 236 Emerson Street Northwest, Orbach at 206 Emerson Street Northwest.

Camp said that the elder Haynes for several years had been engaged in the business of compiling commercial mailing lists, using, for the most part, the city directory for the purpose. Some months ago, he said, Haynes learned he could obtain fuller information through Crandall, the information to include dates of birth, salaries and avocations of Government workers.

Camp pointed out that the information would be useful to many mail order businesses and to insurance companies.

"It has been established," a FBI statement declared, "that the Standard Business Service has compiled information from lists of motor boat owners on file with the Bureau of Navigation, lists of airplane mechanics on file with the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and lists of employes with the Washington Navy Yard.

"Also, Crandall had been contacted previously to secure a list of tool makers in various cities of the United States."

Commission Tightens System

Following Crandall's arrest, the Civil Service Commission tightened up its system of guarding confidential files. Similar moves were made in other Federal agencies.

The commission decreed that no employe will be permitted to take packages in and out of commission buildings without approval of the guard or division chiefs. Furthermore, no stranger or visitor will be permitted in rooms where the files are kept.

The records removed were part of those compiled by the commission several months ago to determine the qualification of every Government employe for work in defense agencies.

About 600,000 of the records had been prepared. They covered abilities of Federal wor'ers for tasks not associated with their jobs, ability to speak foreign languages, knowledge of radio, etc. The records also described in detail the present duties of employes. They had been gathered from every agency of the Government including such vital defense centers as the Panama Canal, shipyards and important bureaus in the War and Navy Departments.

U. S. Bars Ex-Fascist Who Flew to Ill Wife

Miami, Fla., Jan. 27 (U.P.).—Admission to the United States was denied today to Aimone Vanin, retired, Fascist official, who said he left Rome last month to fly to his wife's bedside in Boston.

Immigration authorities here announced Vanin sought to enter this country on a visitor's permit.

ing accident death toll.

With Commissioner J. Russell Young and David McCoach, jr., present at the organization meeting, Schulte demanded that they seek funds for at least 50 additional policemen for full-time traffic duty. The 1941 District Supply bill provides for 25.

"Would you be willing to pay for them out of the highway fund?" McCoach asked.

"What does it matter where we get the money?" responded Schulte. "Why should we sit around and talk while Rome burns? Either you must stand behind proposals for 50 more policemen, or this murdering on the streets will continue."

To Call D. C. Leaders

In line with instructions from the District Committee chairman, Schulte is expected to call before his subcommittee the Commissioners, four Police Court judges, Corporation Counsel Keech, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Traffic Director Van Duzer, and other leaders.

Another "do it now" program, urged upon the Board of Trade yesterday by Col. L. C. Crawford, member of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council, was adopted by the trade board committee on traffic safety. The group indorsed "in principle" proposals to revive a citizens' committee of traffic observers, and recommended approval of the plan by the organization's board of directors.

Col. Crawford described the present traffic toll as "appalling" and warned the committee at a luncheon meeting that "we must stop all this talking about remedies and act now to protect the lives of our citizens."

Efforts of Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District club of the American Automobile Association, to have the matter tabled for future reference, were defeated by a vote of 17 to 14.

Lists 4 Basic Needs

Burton W. Marsh, A. A. A. safety director, told the Board of Trade committee that "we must get back to fundamentals" if the rising accident toll is to be curbed. He suggested four "basic needs":

Adequate leadership in a city-wide safety program.

Decision on a definite goal to be obtained.

Formation of a platform with competent administration.

Wholehearted support from the driving and walking public.

Marsh also commended local traffic and police authorities for 'sincere efforts" to correct the situation, but said they have not been provided with the necessary "implements" to correct conditions. Money, he said, is necessary to do the job.

"And," Marsh added, "if there is a unified will to provide remedies, the funds will be forthcoming. Public interest sufficiently stimulated is the first need. The money can then be found."

At the earlier Congressional conference, Representative Randolph named the following traffic subcommittee members: Representatives McArdle (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland; Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, and Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Improvement Still Needed at Home

equipped to handle in the infirmary.

By means of the new clinic he will be able to treat inmates suffering from nonactive syphilis.

As he has authorty to passi upon applicants for admission, Dr. Wallace has been able to restrcit entrants to the home to the indigent old persons for whom it was intended. With the aid of Mrs. Marie M. Ayres, a social worker just added to the staff, the population, reduced 100 during the last year, and it may be ecreased further. Her chief job will be to check the economic and family conditions of all inmates.

Heretofore, the home has been used as a dumping ground for all ill or indigent adults which other institutions wanted to get rid of. Many of them stayed on after convalescence merely because they had no better place to go.

The $135,000 WPA project, already underway, will give the home 65 additional employes to aid in the operation of the institution. Besides bolstering the custodial service, these employes will wait on the tables.

One of the principal complaints of the inmates when questioned a year ago was that the food was served cold. That was because inmates, slowed up by age, waited on the tables, serving from large containers.

Conrad Van Hyning, assistant welfare director, cut down on the serving time by enlisting the aid of custodial workers and reduced complaints by having the plates heated before each meal. Food trucks which will bring the food into the dining room hot and keep it that way until served are needed badly.

The Commissioners allowed no increase for personnel in the 1942 estimates despite the request of Frank B. Haskell, superintendent, for eight new positions. The WPA project, however, will more than fill the need. Commissioners approved $7,500 for repairs, $4,000 for new furniture in the sun parlors, $1,000 additional for clothing and $500 additional for medical supplies.

The WPA activity designed to stimulate interest of the inmates in recreational and vocational pursuits is one of the most promising undertakings started during the last year. The women already are producing sweaters, shawls, small rugs, bags, et cetera, under supervision. The men haven't started any vocational work yet, but a young girl is teaching them how to play games. A library is being catalogued.

Welfare officials hope that the stimulation of these various interests will do away with the depressing sight of old men and women sitting for hours in the sun parlors and gazing vacantly into space.

Haskell will conclude his service early next fall and will be replaced with a new superintendent as recommended by the House subcommittee on District appropriations. He is actively interested in the new reforms, many of which he originally but some he himself introduced, including a partition to seclude beds in the dormitories.

"I could have one of those made for each of the 700 beds," he explained, "but they cost $5 apiece for material."

ington in three automobiles, from Newport News, Va., where they had made an inspection tour yesterday. May's car was in the vanguard and the second student car went past the accident scene without realizing the others had been involved until they overtook the ambulance in Alexandria.

Two Washington pedestrians were injured by automobiles last night as a snow flurry hampered visibility of local motorists.

Charles Barrows, 53, of 1723 G Street Northwest, was struck by an automobile at Seventeenth and G Streets Northwest and taken to Emergency Hospital with a possible skull fracture and other injuries. Police listed Harold E. Green, 22, of 1451 Fairmont Street Northwest, as driver of the car.

Crossing Florida Avenue in the 900 block, James Harris, colored, 44, of 2126 Ninth Street Northwest, suffered a cerebral concussion when struck by a car driven, according to police, by Washington Beach, colored, 35, of 2505 Sherman Avenue Northwest. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital.

Rain and snow began to freeze on suburban streets and highways, making travel hazardous.

Snow in neighboring States—three inches in Virginia mountains and eight in West Virginia's eastern panhandle — remained on the ground, but roads were cleared for traffic, though they remained slippery and dangerous.

A warning to District motorists preparing to drive north from Washington today that travel was "hazardous" in many sectors was issued by local automobile clubs.

Cloudy and moderately cold weather, with a high temperature of 34 degrees, was forecast for Washington today. The rain or snow was expected to stop before daylight. Highest temperature here yesterday was 35, at 2 p. m., and lowest was 33, at 9 a. m.

Almost the entire northern half of the United States was reported covered by snow yesterday by the Associated Press, with snowfall ranging from 13 inches in Des Moines, Iowa, to 3 and 5 inches in New York and New England.

Air transportation remained at a standstill in Washington and the LaGuardia Field in New York canceled all flights from midnight Sunday to 6 p. m. yesterday.

Peace For War

It is curious to discover from the armistice between Thailand and Indo-China that Japan played the unaccustomed role of peacemaker. It is the more curious since the struggle was one which the Tokyo government did all it could to provoke by encouraging Thailand in Thailand's irredentist ambitions. But just as it was to Japan's advantage at first to embroil Thailand and French Indo-China in conflict, so is it to her present interest to serve as "honest broker" between the erstwhile combatants.

The Konoye regime, which has had an extremely meager record of accomplishment to date, is now in a position to claim a victory of prestige. It can point out to the Japanese that when Thailand and French Indo-China wanted a go-between, the Thailanders appealed not to Great Britain or the United States but to Japan. But, more important, Japan with better grace than heretofore can now ask for favors from Indo-China or Thai, or both, by asserting that her requests are those of a friend. And, to the extent that these demands are granted, Japan will be a step further along the path of conquest in southeastern Asia.

Indeed, in addition to inner compulsions driving Japan in that direction, Tokyo has for some time been under pressure from her Axis partners to launch a drive to the south to coincide with the threatened German assault on England. The Nazi purpose, of course, is to force the United States to limit her aid to Great Britain by creating a new crisis in eastern Asia. That this maneuver will succeed, at least as far as this Nation is concerned, is most unlikely, since we have at last taken the measure of these threats from Tokyo. The problem is whether Japan is committed to concurrent action in Indonesia with Nazi action against Britain. A dovetailing of strategy would seem to have been foreshadowed by the German-Japanese conversations in Berlin, and it looks, indeed, as if the Thai peace may be a sort of clearing for action—a settlement of a little storm to make way for the big storm.

Skull Work

Well, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, the famous curator of physical anthropology at the Smithsonian Institution, has been busy with his callipers again. This time he has been measuring the skulls of his fellow members of the National Academy of Sciences, brainy fellows all. From the data thus collected Dr. Hrdlicka finds that those who pronounce the word "highbrow" with a somewhat scornful inflection may be tactless but not necessarily unjust.

In other words, a vertical forehead is now no guarantee of grade A quality in the stuff behind it. Indeed, the big league brains of the national academicians, Dr. Hrdlicka discovered, were more often than not encased in big, broad skulls decorated outside with dark or darkish hair. Instances of distinctively blond hair were exceedingly rare among them and instances of red hair altogether missing. However, Dr. Hrdlicka drew no rash conclusions, and admitted that there may be other intellectual fields in which the achievements of redheads are as conspicuous as the hair itself.

Anyhow, this seems to dispose for the time being of the once widely prevalent notion that only those blessed by birth and biologic antecedents with dolichocephalic domes and tow-colored locks could ever hope to amount to anything. The natural right of long-headed blonds to lord it over mezzocephalic and brachicephalic people was accepted by many in the first-named category as virtually axiomatic. As most of our readers know, this doctrine is de fide in Nazi Germany.

Of course, if the Nazis are defeated, this theory so industriously promoted by Gobineau, Chamberlain and Madison Grant and Lothrop Stoddard will probably be discarded for the next few hundred years. But if the Nazis win, the theory will be unaffected, we fear, by anything Dr. Hrdlicka may discover against it. All we can say, then, is that if the Nazis are forcibly converted from the fallacy, we hope that the brachycephalic boys won't get it into their big, broad heads that they have a mission to rule the world.

If—

Whether or not our country is in danger of invasion in the event of a Nazi victory is a problem for the experts. We don't profess to have an opinion on the subject. But only those who, as Dante put it, are "squint-eyed in mind" could doubt that we should at once be put in the greatest peril by a Nazi victory. Even Col. Lindbergh admits the peril in his insistence upon a tremendous program of hemispherical defense.

The peril is obvious as soon as we size up the dimensions of a Nazi victory. If Nazi Germany should win the war, the whole of Europe would come under Nazi domination. And this means Russia-in-Europe, too. No independence, as Demaree Bess has shown, could remain in a Russia which had on its front door a Greater German European Empire. Hitler already has earmarked the Ukraine, and Stalin knows it. Under the Moscow-Berlin trade agreements he is already sending into the Soviet Union scores of technicians to reorganize mineral and metal production. Thus the Nazi writ would run from dark Petsamo to the sunny Mediterranean, and from Galway on the Atlantic to the Urals on the Asian border—an aggregation of land power unheard of in world history.

Nor is this all.

There are those who think that a Hitlerized Europe would be a federated Europe. They say that the Germans as winners would clamp down a few peace treaties bringing the parts into some constitutional relation with the whole, and then pack up and go home. Others invoke the lost dream of Napoleon—the man of the code as well as of the sword—as evidence that this is the natural destiny of Europe. But, just as Hitler prepared for a new-type war, so he is preparing for a new-type Europe. The organizational setup for the parts might vary, but all of them would be welded together by hoops of steel, and Hitler's Europe would be a unitary and planned police state, sans law. Already the outline is appearing in the experience of the captive countries. Transfers of machinery from France are reported, and of laborers from the Netherlands. These shifts show that all Europe would have functions as hewers of wood and drawers of water for a Nazi elite serving as the directing, managerial and industrial center of German Europe.

Nor is this all.

A Nazi victory would mean the replacement of Britain on the high seas. And possession of this sea power would potentize a vast shipbuilding capacity in Germanic Europe which is estimated at four times our present shipbuilding capacity. So much has been said of what the British Navy has meant to our security that this point need not be stressed. Let us go on a different tack. The very lack in our people of a consciousness of the problem of security has been due to the presence on the high seas of a friendly and lawabiding nation. We are the only Nation in the world who are moved primarily by our ideals in our relations to other peoples. Other nations, especially border nations, are moved by their sense of security or otherwise. If the idea be retained that Americans and American resources are wholly responsible for our security, let Americans imagine the state of mind which would be created in our Nation by a sea power serving a hostile and police state of this Germanic Europe.

Nor is this all.

Without moving a finger such a combined land and sea power would immediately send its Japanese ally on the warpath after a Pacific empire and would bring about the disintegration of our Pan-American unity. At present the Japanese are contenting themselves with threats from Mr. Matsuoka intended to keep us supine. They are waiting on the sidelines as a potential Pacific empire till Adolf Hitler's success has been assured. Then they must move fast, for they must seek to gain their ends, and round out an empire, before 1946. Then as Mr. Bullitt reminded our legislators, and not before then, our two-ocean Navy will be completed. As for Latin America, the countries below the Rio Grande are tied to us only as long as our hemispherical predominance isn't challenged. Some of them must immediately become satellites of what both Germany and Japan frankly call "the new world order" in the event of a Nazi victory. For in the nature of things they are condemned to follow the "wave" of world power.

Nor is this all.

The new world power would be economically as well as navally supreme. In a Hitlerized population three times our own, labor would be conscripted, technology highly developed, and industrial capacity far in excess of our own. Those who say that even so the enslaved would not be entirely self-sufficient are correct. But the very deficiencies of German Europe would be as ominous as its resources. For Hitler would use his land and sea power as the springboard for economic concessions everywhere. We saw even before the war how Hitler was actually able to dictate in barter deals the terms upon which he bought materials. With an empire back of him, the dictation would be well-nigh universal, and we should then appreciate how the British navy has been the shield not only of world security, but also of a liberal trade policy. Latin America, to take the area closest to us, would be the first victims of dictated trade. For Latin America, which normally sells half its exports to Europe, is the continent which could make up for Hitler's deficiencies in oil, coffee, meat, sugar, copper, wool, cotton and hides.

Such an encircling menace finds some Americans still seeking some reassurance out of our physical safety as a Nation from air attack. Such an argument today is equivalent in footlessness to the cloistered argument of the schoolmen seeking to find out how many angels could dance on the point of a needle. For a counterpart of our situation we must skip back to the notion of security which engaged our founding fathers. The context of their times and ours jibe perfectly. And the shades of Jefferson and Madison are today talking in the same terms of unity with the British which engaged their physical minds when this Nation was last under peril from aggression. Certainly they couldn't accept the Lindbergh thesis. They couldn't acquiesce in an unopposed carving out of a Big Empire in Europe built on despotism. They wouldn't be content to erect on this continent by way of offset a Little Empire built on liberty. They would have the wit to realize that Hitler has grown fat and hopes to grow fatter because other nations have been geographically defensive in a day when physical frontiers have lost all meaning.

Etherized Public

Whatever became of the public? What became of those hundred million people who were expected, nearly two months ago, to raise a terrible row because they were deprived of their right to hear over the radio the music controlled by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers? So lethal has been the silence that this matter would not come to notice now except for the appearance of another party to the dispute between ASCAP and the broadcasters. Lee and J. J. Shubert, theatrical producers, have announced the formation of the Performing Rights Society of the Theater—doubtless destined to be called PRSTI—which will purvey "grand rights" to musical numbers. Grand rights, which the Shuberts declare are not surrendered to ASCAP by producers, involve presentation of dialogue with the song. Officials of Broadcast Music, Inc., the broadcasters' entry in the contest, say they have been aware all the time that grand rights existed. They add, however, that no high court ever has decided where grand rights end and small rights begin.

It would be pleasant if the Shuberts could help get this point settled, but it is hard to see why grand rights could not be exploited without forming still another combination. Without prejudice to the Messrs. Shubert, it might be permissible to point out that our present musical deprivation is the result of too much organization. In fact, some time ago (remember?) the Justice Department announced it was going to prosecute both parties to this dispute under the antitrust laws. At about the same time there was talk of an agreement between ASCAP and the Government which would solve the deadlock. There hasn't been any agreement, yet there hasn't been any prosecution. We're not hearing Irving Berlin and Victor Herbert. If the public doesn't care, it ought to—some, anyway.

Kenneth Simpson

In Representative Kenneth Simpson, who died Saturday at his New York home, the Nation has lost a servant with a promising talent for political leadership. To him politics had not been a mere avocation or means to personal ends, but a career and a medium for accomplishment. An independent thinker, he joined the staff of Theodore Roosevelt's Bull Moose campaign when scarcely out of his teens. He was one of those who helped to put Mayor LaGuardia into office, and was among the first in the Republican organization to support the candidacy of Wendell Willkie. Taking his seat in Congress this month, he was not content, like most freshman members, to be a Representative by observation only. In his 20 days in Washington he took part in the major controversy of the moment, introducing his own substitute for the lend-lease bill. He died at 45, an age at which many legislators can look forward to 20 years of active duty. His 20 days showed what the 20 years might have meant in a position where leadership is at a premium.

THE REAPER

As I came home from starry skies
About that time when roosters crow,
I met against the morning-glow
A farmer-lad with morning eyes.
He spoke to me without surprise.

I turned to watch him walking on.
Toward his dew-dark fields he swung,
A scythe across his shoulder slung,
The reaper to his harvest gone
Down golden lanes of dew and dawn.

He moved with morning in his tread,
His joyful blade to sweep and swing
Against the grain. I heard him sing
When stars were silver overhead.
He did not know my love was dead.

Supports Lindbergh

It is rather amusing to read what some persons have to say about Col. Lindbergh's views and his testimony recently sought and given, and our duty toward England in this crisis. They apparently have never read any history. How did England get to be what she has been until just recently—Queen of the Seas, with land holdings all over this globe? Aggression, theft, murder of weaker peoples. England's hands are none too clean. Why should we go out of our way to spill the blood of our young men in helping a nation that, were the circumstances reversed, would not lift a hand to help us? Fight for "God and our native land," yes, but the best way to do that is mind our own business and keep out of somebody else's fight. Lindbergh's views are the sanest yet set forth. G. A. COBURN.

God's Hand

For months I have waited and hoped that some columnist, some leader among us, would publicly even hint that God may have something to do with the outcome of this hell on earth today, but not until January 24, when I read Mr. T. V. Soong's article in The Post, closing with "And by the Grace of God," even put before "with your help," did I "thank God and take courage."

All religions originated in Asia, and perhaps the time has come for an Oriental to show us boastful, self-righteous, decadent Westerners that now as always, "God rules in the affairs of men," and that "There is no wisdom, nor understanding, nor counsel against the Lord."

Thank you, Mr. Soong, for your faith and courage. Since Japan's onslaught I have prayed daily for China, her Generalissimo, his wife and son, and henceforth your name will be added, and the prayers more earnest. God bless you and give us more such men. A READER.

Of Illusions

The Lindbergh state of mind and its inexcusable illusions are well illustrated by two letters in The Post of January 25.

One writer cites Woodrow Wilson's plea for a negotiated peace without victory, evidently imagining it has some current application. The answer seems easy: First, Wilson soon saw the futility of that plan and substituted for it "force to the uttermost;" second, the Nazi empire of today is so completely bereft of the rudiments of civilized standards, even in comparison with the slightly less barbarous Germany of the Kaiser, that the futility of Wilson's plea is as nothing compared to the futility of a similar plea today. Is this writer unaware of the years of effort of the British to negotiate with Hitler?

Another writer asks first what Secretary Knox meant in saying the war must be "fought to a finish;" second, "when has a major war ever been concluded without a negotiated peace?" Again the answers are easy. Secretary Knox must have meant to the finish of Hitler, to the finish of the brutal enslavement of Belgium, Holland, Norway, France et al., which the Lindbergh type of mind seems to regard without apparent indignation. As for the second question, surely this second writer does not think the treaty of Versailles was a negotiated peace, or that the Germans were present at the peace conference. Hitler calls it a dictated peace. The letter writer may argue that for this reason it was a bad peace, though it left fewer peoples under allen yokes than ever before. But the mistake was not in disarming the Germans, but in failing to keep them disarmed; and for this, of course, America—who not only turned away from the League, but refused even to permit a British blockade on behalf of the League—bears a share of the responsibility.

Comments like those above all imply, as Lindbergh frankly said, that it does not matter who wins the war; that is, that it does not matter whether Europe is civilized or is ruled by Nazi gunmen. There can be no excuse at this late day for ignorance of the character of Nazi rule. But if there are some who prefer barbarism to civilization, that perhaps is a matter of taste. They should, at any rate, have no illusions as to where their arguments lead. J. C.

Keys to Congress

Should the Congress decide to close down its two legislative shops and deliver the most important keys of these shops to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, please do not fail to also vote the name of each member of Congress off the pay roll of the Government. If the Congress fails to do this it shall be guilty of twice, instead of once, of breaking the letter and spirit of the Constitution of the United States.

No one is stronger than I for the new national defense program. Be on with it, and with all speed, even if "all the wealth piled up by the bondsmen's 250 years of unrequited toil shall be sunk." I am also strong for providing help for England, but believe that the proper exchange be given in return for that help. Furthermore, I am strong for open shops in both branches of the legislative body in order that they shall be on hand to measure by yardstick the outgoing help to England and by the same measure determine whether the given exchange is fair or not. HARRY DANIELS.

Fears Over Britain's Future Criticized

In the current discussion over the "lease-lend" bill there is an ominous note of perturbation over the possibility of Great Britain surviving, only to become a competitive form of state socialism. For instance, it is widely assumed that both Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Willkie made their pilgrimages to ascertain the real facts and that Mr. Kennedy's and Col. Lindbergh's confused forensics are best explained by their sincere belief that the United States is faced with a Hobson's choice of ugly realism, regardless of the outcome of the present struggle. This loudly vocal and influential school of thought urges a studied isolation designed to tip the scales in England's favor, yet not withholding a counterpoise of placating compromise in event the Axis powers should win. In so doing they believe that the status quo will be maintained and we will escape the inevitable sequelae of change and disintegration of our political system, which is seemingly inseparable from any complicity in this death struggle of contending ideologies.

But this school of so-called realists have overlooked one thing and that is that we have already modified our political, our economic and our social structure in conformity with the biological dictum that survival of any living organism depends upon their ability to overcome a hostile environment by developing adequate defenses against a predatory opponent. The very thing they fear in Great Britain following a victory is a fait accompli here in the United States. The truth, if they will face the facts, is that your defense against a hostile environment is determined by your aggressive opponent rather than by your own intellectual predilections. If you wish to survive you will not accomplish it by forensics but by an intellectual honesty that does not quibble with reality or enjoin the persuasions of reason and the compulsions of necessity.

To survive we have already accepted the Nazi concept of international law. We, too, make war without declaring it and are belligerent without firing a gun. Our neutrality contravenes the Hague Conventions by providing weapons for our friends and an embargo for our enemies. We parade the Fifth Column before the contempt of the public and enter the War of Nerves as a "nonbelligerent." Indeed, we have gone so far in adopting the Nazi concept of international law that we supply aggressors with the means of destroying the helpless defenders of our own political doctrines.

To survive we have already modified our economic structure to meet the threat of total war, by total defense. Slowly but surely every resourse and every potentiality of our economic system, like the Nazi's, is being converted into the armor which will protect us from the ruthless blade of civilization's assassin.

But the greatest concern of this school of thought is the possibility that the present concept of social security will be discarded for one that not only avows that mankind has an inalienable right to food, clothing and shelter, but actually provides it. Somehow they fear the inevitable reconstruction of society which must follow this debacle of hate and predatory destruction. They believe isolation is possible and that if they denounce the inevitable, they can prevent it from occurring. The truth is to the contrary. We are already affected and we are already participating, and we will undergo a period of reconstruction during which we will either solve our grave social and economic problems or perish. Let us not worry about what is going to happen to England, in event she wins. Rather let us be alert and see to it that regardless of the form our socio-political structure must assume after reconstruction, it will still be democratic in spirit and in truth.

How To Attend A Convention

DEAR JOE:

Take a week off from work, pack the family off to Aunt Phoebe's, fill the icebox with cold cuts, get the half-dozen books you've always wanted to read, lock the doors and pull down the shades. Then fall asleep. At the end of the week you will be refreshed, happy to see your family, and ready for work.

There are more than 5,000,000 people in this country who disagree with that formula for attending a national convention. Annually they leave home, family, friends and job to journey to distant cities where they impair their digestions and fill their ears with words they never can remember. A few are seized with heart attacks. The hardier souls return home haggard-eyed and assure themselves they had a wonderful time by recounting to tolerant families and friends the details of the trip. And a year later they do it again.

Now, don't get me wrong, Joe. I'm looking forward to seeing you in Washington for the annual convention of the Royal Order of the Mystic Men from Mars. What I'm telling you is not mere cynicism collected through boredom at innumerable conventions. I must attend as a reporter. The convention instinct is essentially healthy, I believe.

This custom of attending conventions is as American as hot dogs and soda pop. It's a good deal older than either. Democracy got its start at a convention in 1776. It's been talked about at every convention ever since, although no gathering has done so much about it. It grew with the first political conventions and with the great revivals in the bottom lands of the Middle West early in the nineteenth century.

But it took the twentieth century to put a convention into evening dress, transfer all of its business to committees, give it at least one "big name" for a speaker, and substitute floorshows and sightseeing buses for the dry-as-dust talkers.

A couple of days before the convention of the Mystic Men from Mars convenes, the Grand Mogul, several minor Moguls and a group of hard-working committeemen of the organization arrive here. In efficient committee sessions these men draft a budget, nominate a slate of officers and propose several resolutions. An entertainment chairman hires an orchestra, some singers, dancers and maybe a magician. A fleet of buses or cars is dated to take patriotic pilgrims to a national shrine at 50 cents a head. Now they're ready for you, Joe.

When you arrive at the convention, you'll inevitably fall into one of four classifications. You'll be a convention heel, a convention booster, a convention scoffer, or plain Joe Doakes with a healthy respect for your heredity, a lively interest in the world you live in, and a shrewd skepticism about what men say concerning your future.

The convention heel has a couple of drinks before he goes to the opening session. He calls the Grand Mogul "Butch," slaps everybody within reach on the back, and goes out for a couple more drinks. If he stayed in the bar he might not be the convention heel.

But he's brought back by the convention booster. The convention booster type is usually a small, nervous man with at least two badges who is no match for the bull-necked heel variety. Therefore he wheedles him back to a convention session where the heel can annoy more people.

Like the convention booster, the convention scoffer attends every session. Often he is accompanied by his wife—which is probably the reason he is the convention scoffer.

"The Grand Mogul's getting pretty old and fat, isn't he?" the scoffer will say within earshot of the booster who suffers more at the scoffer's barbs than he does at the horseplay of the heel.

The favorite rhetorical question of the scoffer, however, is: "What's the point of wasting all our time with these reports anyway?"

It's a question you'll find hard to answer.

You'll avoid all these types if you're wise, Joe. After a day or two of sessions you'll discover that with the exception of one or two speakers, the adoption of resolutions and the election of officers, the business isn't worth sitting through.

You should seek out companions from other sections of the country then, Joe. A ball park is an excellent place to spend a convention afternoon if it's the right season. In New York there is always the aquarium and in Washington there is always Congress.

If you have kept your native sense about you and not become a heel, a booster or a scoffer, you will have learned several things by the time the convention closes. You will have learned that the internal self-perpetuating business of the organization was completed before you even arrived, and that you, along with hundreds of others, have been kidded into believing you accomplished the work in reality you only gave it a rubber stamp of approval.

You will have expressed the opinion that democracy is fine, but your opinion has received less attention than if you uttered it in the corner drugstore back home. You have heard several speakers, but all you can remember is the one who called Hitler "that man with three eyebrows," and another who declared, "We're lucky to be on the Pacific side of the Atlantic."

What you won't forget is the night you and the fellow from Portland, Oreg., strolled down Constitution Avenue and saw the lights gilding the dome of the Capitol as you talked about the future of business in the Northwest. But that's rather difficult to include in a convention report to the folks back home.

Chiang In Control

By Mark J. Gayn

Rise And Fall Of China's 4th Army

ASIA'S MOST FAMOUS fighting unit is the Chinese Eighth Route Army, battling Japanese troops in the mountains west of Peiping. Second in fame only to the Eighth is the Fourth Route Army, whose roaming grounds once stretched inland from Shanghai.

Last week the Fourth was no more. A laconic announcement issued in Chunking revealed that Chinese regular troops had dispersed the Fourth Army and arrested its famous commander, Gen. Yen Ting.

Other reports leaking out by the grapevine route indicated that the Communist leaders in Chungking were under a modified form of "home arrest," that serious friction existed between Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the Eighth Army, and that Chungking was applying "pressure" against the recalcitrant unit.

The news had the effect of a bombshell. For three years reports of differences between Gen. Chiang and the two Communist-led armies have been the favorite diet of Japanese propagandists. The items were issued with the regularity of weather reports—and much less trusted.

The Chungking communique was the first official admission that not all was well with Free China. It caused deep alarm, both at home and abroad. Some observers tried to fathom the effect of the squabble on China's continued resistance. Others awaited Moscow's reaction. Still others attempted to trace the connection between the destruction of the Fourth and the nearly simultaneous grant of the $100,000,000 American loan to China.

THE THREE-YEAR story of the birth, rise and fall of the Fourth Army is written in terms of blood, intrigue and social upheavals.

Back in 1933, when the Fourth was not yet, Gen Yen Ting was one of the Communist chieftains opposing Chiang Kai-shek's troops in the rugged mountains of Central China. When, a year later, the Red armies decided to make the Long March—3,500 miles—to the northwest, Yen was left behind to cover the retreat.

The bulk of the Communist troops managed to reach their destination in 1935. When the Japanese invaded North China in 1937, these men were rushed into action under the name of the Eighth Route Army.

Yen successfully fought his rear-guard battles and then retired to the mountains of the Yangtze Valley. For the next three years he served as a liaison agent, engaged in undercover work among the discontented peasantry, and conducted propaganda. But as soon as the Japanese seized Nanking, spreading havoc and driving countless refugees inland, Yen decided the time had come for decisive action.

Yen's opposition came only partly from the Japanese. His bitterest foes were the petty warlords, the landed gentry and some Kuomintang factions—China's Tories—into whose territory he was branching out.

The area chosen by Yen for his operations included the three rich provinces of Kiangsu, Chekiang and Anhwei. Kiangsu contains Shanghai. Chekiang is known in China as "the birthplace of millionaires," and the bankers and industrialists of Shanghai are described as "the Chekiang clique." Anhwei draws its wealth from fertile soil and the Yangtze River trade.

The three provinces are run by an alliance of local army generals, absentee warlords and Shanghai bankers. This cabal paid for Chiang Kai-shek's divorce from the Communists in 1927. Later, it subsidized—and controlled—the nationalist government. The alliance suffered tremendous property losses in the war, but it was still rich—and still determined to let no Communists poach upon its preserves.

Thus, from the very first day, Yen came into trouble with the "Tory" bloc. Local military commanders kept his guerrillas out of their territory. The Kuomintang Party fought tooth and nail to keep the Communist organizers from their political pastures. The landlords, fearful that Communist propaganda would lead the impoverished tenants to seize the land they tilled but did not own, used all their influence to hinder the work of the Fourth.

And yet, the Fourth grew. The Reds who did not go on the Long March north flocked to Yen's standards. The Chinese soldiery defeated in Nanking joined the army. So did thousands of peasants, to whom Yen promised not only revenge on the Japanese but also a program of economic betterment, lower taxes, redivision of the vast holdings of the absentee landlords.

And soon, like its counterpart in the north, the Fourth became a sharp thorn in the side of the Japanese forces. While the Chinese regular troops fought positioned battles along the fringes of the Japanese-occupied area, Yen's men fought within it. They wrecked trains, waylaid Japanese army trucks, stopped trade with the Japanese-held cities. And each Japanese punitive expedition only added angry, desperate men to the ranks of the Fourth.

The audacity of the Fourth drew other recruits. Yen's men raided the Japanese-occupied airdrome within sight of Shanghai and hoisted the Chinese flag atop its buildings. Others made nightly forays into the Japanese lines around Shanghai, to retire in the morning, leaving behind two, three, a dozen bodies of Japanese soldiers.

In 1939, the anti-Fourth alliance could stand it no more. Through the summer and fall of that year, units of the Fourth moving into new territory were met with Chinese bullets. The clashes were not on a large scale, but they were indicative of the rapidly growing friction. On a few occasions in 1940, the skirmishes developed into regular pitched battles.

THROUGH THESE squabbles, Gen. Chiang preserved a sphinxian silence. Until the late fall of 1940 China's position was so precarious that her leader could not afford a misstep. Personally, Chiang was firmly opposed to the extension of Communist influence in what was once his own foothold. It was also obvious that once the propertied men of the Yangtze Valley thought he sided with the Reds, they would quickly succumb to the wooing of Japanese puppets.

It was necessary to reassure the landlords, the warlords and the Kuomintang conservatives of Chiang's continued opposition to communism. On the other hand, it could not be denied that the Communists formed the backbone of Chinese resistance. It was impossible to oust them without gravely—perhaps fatally—weakening China.

Moreover, deprived of British aid in July, 1940, China had to place all her reliance upon Russia. And the price of Soviet airplanes, field guns and gasoline has increased Communist participation in the Chungking government.

Moscow very obviously did not want to weaken Chinese resistance by precipitating a clash between the Chungking "Tories" and the Communists. But the Kremlin looked ahead—far beyond the Sino-Japanese conflict—and it wanted to be certain that when the right moment arrived, the Communists would be in a position to deal a blow for revolution.

Gen. Chiang thus walked his political tight rope and tried to get as much as possible out of Moscow by giving as little as possible to the Eighth and Fourth Rout armies.

By this time, the cries of protest from the propertied men in the Yangtze Valley had become deafening. Chungking had to act. Thus, Chiang's "brain trusters" devised a scheme for shifting the troublesome Fourth north of the Yangtze River, where the Communists were already strongly entrenched and where neither Chiang nor the Kuomintang conservatives had important interests.

The Fourth refused to move. It was doing well in the Yangtze Valley, and it did not want to evacuate what it felt was the major anti-Japanese front and the potential base of the Great Chinese Revolution.

The conflict—significantly—was brought to a head by Washington. In October, the United States induced Britain to reopen the Burma Road, in the face of Japanese threats. Once supplies began to trickle into China through Burma, Chunking's dependence upon Russia lessened.

Next came several minor American loans, increasing tension between the United States and Japan, the numerous signs that China was to be included within that bloc for which America was to be the arsenal.

With these indications, Gen Chiang sanctioned bold action in the Yangtze Valley. The Fourth was given a time limit to move north of the river. When the demand was ignored, the army was surrounded, attacked and defeated. Yen Ting was captured.

And, as if to forestall Moscow's possible retaliation, Washington announced the grant of a $100,000,000 loan to Chunking. Within a few weeks Soviet Russia suffered the double blow of the elimination of the Fourth and a sudden boost in American influence in Chungking. Obviously, no threats could help. Moscow, therefore, promptly echoed the American loan with credits of its own—slightly in excess of $100,000,000.

The game of power politics was in full swing. And the Fourth was no longer an army, but yesterday's headline. It had fallen victim of social cataclysms which it, itself, helped to provoke.

Record Of Betrayal

IT WILL ANSWER much of Col. Lindbergh's recent testimony to recall that the German nation, as personified by Adolf Hitler, has shown itself to be such a liar, thief and assassin that it would be folly for the United States to attempt to do business with a victorious Germany on a basis of good faith. Lindbergh believes it will be necessary to get along with Germany should Hitler win. Other possibilities intervene, but to ignore all these and reduce the problem to its simplest phase, the fact is that Lindbergh asks his own country to undertake relations with a nation whose spiritual leader has written in the sky the fact that his promises are lies and that anyone who trusts him is a fool.

In relations between man and man the individual whose conduct resembles that of Adolf Hitler acquires a reputation as a no-good, to say nothing of a criminal record. In time he is shunned by all but other criminals, and he can't get credit for a small beer.

HITLER'S RECORD of betrayal began long before Czecho-Slovakia, but, not to go all the way back, that brutal killing will do for a starter. He gave his word not to invade or annex Czecho-Slovakia even to the extent of saying that he wanted none of the contemptible Czechs, and followed that assurance with a military conquest for which he didn't even bother to offer an excuse.

Finally, in response to a note from President Roosevelt imploring him to keep the peace, Hitler specifically asked a larger number of nations to say frankly whether they felt that their safety was threatened by Germany, and used their answers in the form of a rebuke to the United States for meddling in European affairs and impugning the sacred honor of the German people. Living right under Germany's big guns, Poland, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and Rumania replied that, of course, they had no such fear and, having no honor to lose, Hitler took that occasion further to assure all these and others that he never would so much as take a divot out of their sovereign lands.

NOBODY, except perhaps Lindbergh, needs telling what Hitler did to these countries, notwithstanding these and other, more detailed, solemn pledges of that which is called the sacred honor of the German race. However, it will emphasize the perfidy of the Fuehrer to recall that in the undeclared war on peaceful Norway, Hitler began operations by sending over in civilian guise young soldiers who, as babies, had been saved from starvation and sheltered in the very homes of the Norwegian people, to whom they now returned as welcome foster children. When the hour struck, these exemplars and guardians of the German honor turned on the people who had sheltered and fed them as helpless victims of the first World War.

That is the honor with which Lindbergh would have his own country conduct relations in the world of the future, the sort of people, schooled in treachery and taught to regard deceit as a personal, national and racial virtue, whom the Colonel would meet on terms of good faith.

LINDBERGH, and those who believe as he does, offer no plan by which this Nation, in that future world, could protect itself from treachery backed by brutalities which have been described so often in such detail that they are now old and familiar horrors. But just as an honest man cannot do business on even terms with a thief and cheat, it would seem that the United States must either live entirely apart from a victorious Germany and her slave states and keep constantly armed to fight the greatest war machine in all history, wholly, or abandon the morals which civilized people try, at least, to live up to, and become a criminal nation, too, in collaboration with Hitler.

I have read Lindbergh's speeches and testimony carefully, and find that his early omissions of spiritual or moral things were not accidental. He has consistently dealt with material things as though a strong, rich America, bulging with muscle, were all right, even though it were necessary to discard the virtues that give warmth to human existence. He ignores entirely Hitler's own recent declaration that Hitlerism is at war with the American concept and that never the twain shall meet except to fight.

Purvis Schedule Gathers Dust

THE PRESIDENT and William S. Knudsen now have on their desks the first consolidated schedule of British war needs ever prepared. To meet these needs, our industrial plant must undergo immense additional expansions. Because the British have no cash, the schedule has simply been gathering dust since it was brought to this country, four weeks ago, by Arthur Purvis, chief of the British purchasing mission. It will continue to gather dust until the lease-lend bill is passed.

Furthermore, if letting contracts for the new expansions is put off much longer, the entire British war plan will have to be recalculated, and another year may be added to the war. The British propose to take the offensive in the spring of 1942, and rely on this country to supply their deficiencies in war materials as listed in the Purvis schedule. Defense production experts believe the deficiencies can be supplied on time—but only if the tremendous task of building the required new facilities is started within the next 30 to 60 days.

SUCH ARE the hard facts of a situation which has been almost universally misrepresented. Even among supporters of aid to Britain, many assume the lease-lend bill can safely be debated indefinitely, since "there's nothing we can do in the next few months." The assumption is doubly incorrect, for the crucial reason above stated, and also because the bill permits solution of the increasingly serious shipping problem without repeal of the neutrality act or use of American convoys.

The Purvis schedule is unquestionably the most significant single document yet produced by the war. It was obtained with difficulty. As long ago as last September, officials of the defense commission and British purchasing mission wise enough to grasp the tragic inadequacy of our scope of preparation, began to realize that Britain must succinctly list her needs to have them fully met by this country. At that time, of course, American policy was immobilized by the election. It was not until rather late in the fall that Purvis flew to England, to persuade the British Cabinet to communicate to our Government a complete war plan and war material balance sheet.

THE PRESIDENT has been demanding a balance sheet of our defense program for the last six months. So many statistical obstacles have had to be surmounted that the President is still waiting, although he will get what he wants before long. The same sort of obstacles stood in Purvis' way in London. Yet he managed to beg and persuade the necessary figures and information out of the service and supply departments in a comparatively short time. The schedule was finished in December, and Purvis immediately flew back to this country.

To prepare the schedule, it was necessary to compute Britain's war materials on hand, the quantities of new materials called for by the British war plan, the materials expected to be produced in Britain and the Empire, and finally the deficiencies to be supplied here. As the result plainly discloses Britain's strategy, the schedule's exact figures are naturally the most closely guarded military secrets, communicated by Purvis only to the President, and by the President only to three or four of the most responsible men in the Government.

TWO THINGS about the schedule are known, however. First, it is based on the expectation that Britain will survive the terrible time immediately ahead, will gather strength next winter, and with arms from the United States will undertake a great offensive in the spring of 1942. This expectation is understood to have been impressively documented, and particularly with respect to the possibility of an effective offensive. Second, however, the quantities of arms asked for from this country are almost astronomical. Even William S. Knudsen, ordinarily so phlegmatic, was briefly shaken when he saw how many more planes and ships were wanted. And although he and his production experts think they can do the job in time, a prompt start and grim concentration of every ounce of national energy are both urgently necessary for success.

If the policy of aid-to-Britain means anything, its purpose is not merely to get the British through the spring and summer. On the contrary, its purpose is to assist the British to rid the world, for good and all, of the universal threat of the new tyrannies. If this is to be accomplished the United States must begin to take the long view, gearing its output to the British war plan and avoiding both foolish delay and foolish underestimation of the task in hand.

THE MAGNITUDE of that task is clearly set down in the Purvis schedule, which also gives evidence that the task is not impossible. It will be done, the experts calculate, if we convert only 25 per cent of our productive facilities to war uses. As Germany for years and Britain for months have devoted much more than 50 per cent of their production to war uses, we should not boggle at the attendant sacrifices.

Sacrifices will be useless, however, so long as some system of financing the British war effort remains to be approved. For the last two months the British have not been able to place even the most urgent orders in this country. Planning the expansions called for in the Purvis schedule has had to wait, while British and American officials searched for a way out to finance contracts that should have been placed in November. Only in the last week has the RFC approved a scheme by which money will be put up on the basis of "we'll take the goods if you don't," and this scheme is only to apply to absolutely vital orders. Some notion of the extent of the expansions yet to be planned may be gained from the fact that the curve of our aircraft capacity will have to shoot upward, past the mark of 3,000 planes a month now set for the spring of 1942, to a new mark of 4,500. In short, time is unimaginably precious, and the waste of so much as a day is folly.

England's 'Busy Bee'

Beaverbrook's Days

This is the second of a series of articles on Lord Beaverbrook, head of England's aircraft production.

By Hugh Wagnon
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 27.—The afternoon sun suddenly broke through the clouds and flooded the gardens of Cherkley, Surrey. Inside an old-fashioned English country home a wheezy little man bounced from a chair, his wide mouth smiled and he motioned his companion, a newspaperman, to "come along."

As the two men walked into the garden and the sunshine, the little man divested himself of his coat, then his vest and his trousers—then everything else.

Lord Beaverbrook, asthmatic financier, publisher and politician, was ready for his sun bath, his favorite remedy for asthma, which is troublesome when he has time to think about it.

This incident, in the summer of 1939, reveals much of his character, his opportunism, his worry over his health, his freedom from inhibitions and the driving energy that keeps him talking business even while bathing, whether in the sun or a tub.

Asthma doesn't bother him much now that he is working 18 hours a day, pushing and pulling planes from Britain's assembly lines with his own rare confection of blunt talk, cajolery, bluster and wheedling. He uses "spur and whip and sometimes a bag of cats" on tardy makers of airplane materials.

His day begins with breakfast in bed, served by his long-time man servant and friend, Albert, usually about 7:30 a. m. Tastes acquired as a boy in Canada still linger. His favorite breakfast includes Canadian bacon, maple sirup and coffee.

He is up at 8 and at the office before 9, frequently embarrassing his secretaries and staff by being the first on the job.

Generally he works in his office at the ministry from 9:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m., but he doesn't stop working then. He simply transfers it to his home and goes on, often until 2 a. m., bringing into the office the next morning a sheaf of notes or dictaphone records of instructions for the secretaries.

"We begin the day already at least a day behind," a secretary said plaintively.

War cabinet meetings sometimes interrupt his mornings. Even the war cabinet must do without him when he is on an urgent task.

He was the only member of the war cabinet too busy to attend the Pilgrim Society's luncheon for Lord Halifax before the new Ambassador to the United States was to leave for Washington.

Luncheon—a bit of cold chicken and a salad—doesn't interrupt his incessant telephoning and conferences. Often he has several persons in the room and sometimes he invites a visitor to lunch with him at his desk. Mostly he takes them as they come, eats and fires questions while a secretary takes notes.

Unless he is having an important or private conference, callers are admitted as they come, so that not a second is lost between calls. His eight secretaries work in relays, virtually around the clock.

Every afternoon he summons his chief aides for a conference and reports, as he summoned his editors in the old days when he was building the London Express into the biggest daily newspaper circulation in the world.

Sitting in a big chair, he presides informally, runs through reports with a word for each. When dissatisfied, a sharp reproof brings a flush of embarrassment. His approval, "First rate," causes a flush of pleasure.

He leaves no one indifferent.

He works long after most of the employes have gone. His dinner may be as late as 10 o'clock. He dines simply but well. Soup and game or chicken and dessert and coffee are most often chosen. He's fond of plover, pheasant and partridge and other game birds.

His guests may have the finest vintage champagne and excellent cigars, but Beaverbrook contents himself with one whisky and soda a day and doesn't smoke. But he often makes a show of drinking to put his guests at their ease.

"He likes to give the appearance of enjoying his hospitality with guests," a friend observed, "but watch him and you'll see how little he really takes."

Dinner is served ordinarily by four footmen at Stornoway House, off Green Park, unless it is a special occasion, like the entertaining of Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal representative, on January 22, when cabinet ministers and London editors, as well, were at the gathering.

Aircraft manufacturers, ministry for faster action, for delivery of officials and air marshals dine with him once or twice a week.

The telephone often interrupts the meal and guests hear him prodding trucks and materials or demanding pilots.

After dinner he quizzes guests, asking them questions with the persistence of an inquiring reporter.

When the party retires he again slips into high gear on the telephone and dictaphone.

His idea of a weekend in the country is to work at the ministry until 8 or 9 p. m. Saturday, then have his chauffeur drive him 20 miles, air raids or no, to the country.

His principal private secretary, J. Eaton Griffith, was awarded the Order of the British Empire in the New Year's honors list. A friend said:

"He deserved the Victoria Cross," and added:

"It's quite likely Lord Beaverbrook thought so, too."

His task absorbs all of Beaverbrook's energy and attention. He takes no exercise of any kind and no relaxation except now and then to view a film in his private theater.

Two Kinds Of Aid

By Mark Sullivan

Direct And Indirect Help To Britain

AMERICA should understand the difference between two ways of helping Britain with credit and supplies. One is the direct way. The other is the indirect way, as set forth in the pending "lease-lend" bill. Between the two methods, the difference is very great.

SULLIVAN

And the decision to take one of the ways will be more than this one decision—it will be a decision upon many future steps.

Let us outline these two methods, and their respective consequences:

The direct method would be to go straight to the bill's purpose. It would be for the Government of the United States to make a loan to the government of Britain. This method is simple and familiar—our government has recently made such loans to China and other countries.

What would be the consequences of this method? For us, it would have no consequences. Our Government just makes the loan to Britain, and does nothing else. Thereafter Britain would keep on buying supplies from private American manufacturers, just as it does now. She would keep on paying cash, as now, getting the new cash out of our Government loan to her. Everything would go on as it now goes on. All the supplies that Britain gets from America, she would get as she now gets them, by purchase from private manufacturers. There would be no change in our neutrality status. Whatever our neutrality status is, it would continue to be. The status of our manufacturers, as respects Britain and as respects the war, would be the simple status of sellers of supplies. The status of our Government in relation to Britain would be the simple status of lender of money, the status of creditor.

Britain would buy the supplies. She would own the supplies. She would do with the supplies whatever she wishes. She would use them herself if she wishes. She might turn some over to Greece, or to China, or send them elsewhere. Whatever she does with them would be wholly her responsibility. There would be no responsibility on the United States—our responsibility would end with the act of making the loan. All the future control would be with Britain, all the responsibility would be on Britain, all the consequences would accrue to Britain.

Now consider the other method, the indirect method, the method provided in the pending bill. By the bill, no money is loaned to Britain. By the bill, no war supplies are bought by Britain from our manufacturers. By the bill, it is the President of the United States who gets the money and buys the supplies.

By the bill, Congress grants money to the President. With this money the President will buy war supplies from private manufacturers, or manufacture them in Government arsenals, or otherwise procure them. After the President buys the supplies, he will "sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend, or otherwise dispose of [the supplies] to any . . . government." The President will transfer the supplies to Britain or to any other government in his discretion. He will transfer them by any method he chooses, including gift.

It is clear that this puts the President in a position of responsibility. He buys the supplies, he has them in his official hands. In his discretion, he turns the supplies over to such nations as he may choose, in such quantity as he chooses. The President has discretion, and responsibility, with respect to who shall receive the supplies, what use shall be made of them. Presumably he would send most of the supplies to Britain; but quite certainly he would, in his discretion, send them to Greece and China. If other nations enter the war, on the anti-Axis side, he will send supplies to them. If the President thought that, by promising supplies to a nation not at war, he could persuade that nation to enter the war, he would undoubtedly, and properly, send supplies to that nation—Turkey, for example. The decisions President Roosevelt makes will be as important as the decisions Winston Churchill makes.

It is a great responsibility—and it is a continuing responsibility. It is a responsibility for the duration of the war. It is actually a responsibility for the conduct of the war. Daily, hourly, as the war develops, the President will make decisions—will send supplies to what nation or what area of war he considers best for the winning of the war.

Actually, it is a responsibility for winning the war. And can we have responsibility for winning the war—and still pretend we are not in the war? Will we be able to avoid being all the way in? Once we are actively engaged in helping to win, will not our national pride, at that stage, lead us to make sure that winning is certain? Suppose, at a future stage, it becomes apparent that more supplies from us are not enough to win the war, would we not send the men?

This responsibility would be avoided—if our wish really is to avoid it—by confining our present action to a mere loan to Britain—leaving to her all responsibility for conducting the war.

This decision is immediately ahead of us. The choice will be made by the action of Congress beginning this week. It should be made by Congress and the people, with clear understanding of the responsibility involved.

Judge Fay Bentley Tells Women Of Juvenile Court's Gains and Needs

Among members of the League of Women Voters who yesterday visited the new Juvenile Court Building were Mrs. Henry P. Paul Johnston (right), chairman of the subcommittee on child welfare, shown with Judge Fay Bentley of the court

D. C. Voters' Group Hears Law Provides Community Saving

Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, welcomed members of the child welfare committee of the Voteless District League of Women Voters in her office at the new Juvenile Court Building yesterday in a discussion of the court's work since the new law became effective in 1938.

In the party were Mrs. Jessie Adkins, wife of Judge Adkins, and Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer, wife of the chairman of the Social Security Board, who worked actively in support of the measure that changed the juvenile court law of the District from one of the worst to one of the best in the country. Mrs. F. Paul Johnston, who recently came to Washington from Westfield, N. J., is chairman of the child welfare committee of the league, and Mrs Henry P. Chandler is chairman of the department of Government and Social Welfare under which it functions.

The greatest need of the court at present, Judge Bentley told the women, is a more adequate staff. From the financial side alone, she pointed out, the court more than pays for itself. Last year $206,069 was collected in support cases which otherwise would have been on relief, representing a net saving to the community. The total cost of all services is half the amount collected on support orders alone, said Judge Bentley. The saving, from the standpoint of human values—keeping children in their homes and preventing them from becoming community charges—cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, she pointed out.

The facts Judge Bentley presented confirmed the league in its stand for additional appropriations for personnel and needed facilities such as a psychiatric clinic, Mrs. Chandler declared afterward.

Federation Favors D. C. Representation

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

The question of suffrage for the District brought an expression of sharp division of opinion at the meeting of the District Federation of Women's Clubs at Hotel 2400 yesterday. At the end of a heated discussion, the District group voted to recommend to the General Federation of Women's Clubs that it indorse the proposed amendment to the Constitution "empowering Congress to grant to the residents of the District of Columbia voting representation in the Senate and House of Representatives and among the electors of President and Vice President, and the same access to the courts of the United States as is enjoyed by the citizens of a State."

The resolution was submitted by Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, vice chairman of the resolutions committee of which Mrs. Virginia White Speel is chairman.

Mrs. Ernest William Howard, chairman of the legislative committee, presented a statement scoring the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and charging it with failure to offer anything constructive in the cleanup of local conditions as they exist today. In conclusion, she declared "in the very near future, we shall be compelled to urge the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to make new appointments to the Alcoholic Beverage Board."

No action was taken by the federation.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president, presided at the meeting which included not only business but a program on which Dr. Ernest Griffith, legislative reference chief of the Library of Congress, and Mrs. Leslie Clark Stevens were the guest speakers.

The present crisis in democracy long preceded the war, Dr. Griffith told members of the Federation. "The war itself is a symptom of the crisis," he said. Actually every industrial nation that has changed over from a democracy to a dictatorship has done so at a time of economic collapse. This change to dictatorship was brought about in large measure because the emotional situation arising from widespread unemployment was too great to be borne without a solution.

"A more fundamental difficulty lies in the inability of nations to work out consistent programs looking toward full employment because of the insistence of special groups on governmental favors," he continued. "Most legislation these days is the result of the pressure of special groups and consequently much of the legislation is inconsistent."

"We need, therefore, some blueprint for unity and coordination of all forces in our national life. We need also an appeal to the spirit of men and groups for the necessary sacrifices to bring about this unity," he declared. "This appeal must be made by religion and patriotism acting together. Patriotism by itself may threaten the place and rights of the individual but the religious view of the nature of man as a child of God is a safeguard."

Mrs. Stevens told of the war work of women in Britain and was introduced by Mrs. Hugh Butler.

Mrs. George O. Gillingham presented the prizes offered in the federation's essay contest for Boys' Club members on "How to Be A Good American Citizen." They were won by John Laycock, first; Warner Kidwell, second; Milton Byrum, third; Harry Barch and Bobby Lyles, honorable mention.

Music for the program was provided by Mrs. Marie C. Deal, soprano, and George Harold Miller, baritone, accompanied by Elsie Harvey Weaver.

Y.W.C.A. Elects Board Members

Eight new members were elected to the board of the Y. W. C. A. last night at the local association's annual dinner meeting, held in Barker Hall, with about 200 attending.

The new members are Mrs. Fred E. Buschmeyer, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Miss Anne Larrabee, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Stuart A. Rice and Mrs. Stanley Smith. Some have served at other times on the board and all are active in various phases of Y. W. C. A. work.

Board members reelected include Mrs. Donald B. Clement, Mrs. William Hurd Hill, Miss Margaret R. Fox and Mrs. James K. McClintock.

The nominating committee elected for 1941 includes Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, Mrs. Henry DeC. Adams and Miss Elizabeth Morrow. Two general members include Miss Annabel Matthews and Mrs. Elva G. Wells.

The program, following announcement of election returns, was a panel discussion of "What Washington Expects of the Y. W. C. A."

On the panel were Mrs. Eugene Callahan, chairman of the A. A. U. W. legislative committee; Gerald Brown, a taxi driver; Miss Ella Gardner, of the Department of Agriculture; Dr. Eugenia A. Leonard, of Catholic University; Mrs. M. K. Madame Chairman

—By Suzanne

MRS. LEO KASEHAGEN, regent of Monticello Chapter, D. A. R., has received news of England's chapter, the Walter Hines Page, through her sister, Mrs. Frederick Carpenter-Holland-Griffith, who is a member of that chapter. Mrs. Griffith's estate, Biddleman Close, is not far from Bedford, one of the home country towns in the Eastern Midlands, and near the River Ouse. This country is now full of cratered fields, broken windows, bombed churches, schools and stores and many homes. The letters speak for themselves. One from Mrs. Martha E. Hawes, past historian of Walter Hines Page Chapter, says, in part: "Many thanks for the Washington papers. I will send them to Mrs. Fishburn, chapter regent. Mrs. Luling, state regent, has left the city and is in the country with her daughter."

"We tried to have a board meeting at Claridge's restaurant one day, and only six came. Mrs. Luling was one of them. We decided we must have a general meeting in January, if possible.

Mrs. Mennell (a member and also first vice president of the American Woman's Club) said she would have the meeting at her house; they live in Park Square, which is along Maryleborne Road. They have no windows in their drawing room, but have a nice, large basement kitchen and we could meet there and she would give us lunch. Her husband is a doctor and has all of the ground floor of the house. If they do not get bombed before the middle of January, I think the meeting will take place. We need to decide about delegates to Washington for the April congress."

A LETTER from Mrs. Griffith, dated: "Boxing Day, December 26. We had a peaceful Christmas and one could almost hear the angels sing! And we have had a chance to breathe for two nights and could sleep—sleep! I have done what I could for the others, but having so many families on my hands has been not entirely restful.

"A friend from Los Angeles sent a contribution to help in Christmas gifts for my evacuees. She suggested buying oranges, blocks of chocolate, nuts, etc., to put in net stockings, on a tree. The net I could easily manage, but chocolate! The available supply must have been taken over for the army, as there is none to buy. As for oranges, occasionally I have been able to wangle three or four. Only one lemon per week, 20 cents each. This week, not any. All the oranges and lemons I can acquire I give to ill people. I took three oranges to my head gardener today. He has been very sick and the doctor wanted him to have orange juice. Also sent two oranges and a lemon to another ill person today, when I felt that I could have relished them mightily myself. Asking my grocer before Christmas for several dozen oranges merely made him laugh. Possibly the hospitals take all that come safely across the waters.

"I was lucky to get a Christmas fruit cake and other necessary things from Harrods, London. Had no turkey, though; heaps on the market, but $1 a pound—too much!

"The rates are very high on Biddenham Close. Should I decide to store all the furnishings, I would have nothing to pay. Empty house law! And taxes! Out of 20 shillings the government leaves us 11 shillings 6 pence! Onion prices are fabulous. They are cheap to grow; you can blame the law of supply and demand! English farmers put down a larger crop than usual, but it was trifling compared to consumption. An apple shortage is inevitable. I could get more than 20 cents a pound for my Cox's Pippins and the Blenheim orange apples, but I have been giving them to less fortunate friends and to the hospitals."

Farm and Garden Group Honor Mrs. Francis King

Mrs. Francis King, founder of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, yesterday was guest of honor at the luncheon meeting of the organization's Capital Division. Lewis Franke, of the National Defense Commission, was the speaker at the meeting, which was held at the Highlands.

Mrs. King reviewed the history of the association, recalling that it was patterned after the farm and garden units of England, designed to promote cooperation between rural and urban women, and that it was responsible for starting the Woman's Land Army of the United States.

Mr. Franke told the women they could best cooperate in the defense program by continuing the work in which they were now engaged.

Mrs. Murray Boocock, national president, and Mrs. J. W. Johns, of Charlottesville, Va., president of the Capital Division, were present. Among the guests were Miss Rose Greeley, Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Robert Patterson and three Baltimore members, Mrs. Harry R. Slack, Mrs. Robert S. Belknap and Mrs. J. Morrison Harris.

Your Posture Comes First In 'Make-Over'

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU were to go to one of the "make yourself over" salons along Fifth Avenue, you would be surprised how little time is spent in teaching you to use cosmetics—and how much in coaching you to sit, stand and walk. Unless you carry yourself well, everything is spoiled. You can apply some of these same tests and do your own coaching at home.

Let's check up on the way you stand—walk up to a wall until the toes of both feet are right against it, and stand naturally. How much of you is in contact with the wall? Only the toes and chest should touch. If your nose touches, it's evidence that you are poking your head forward instead of keeping a nice, straight line at the back of the neck. And along with this fault there is a tendency to let the shoulders go forward.

Tummy Touches

If your stomach touches the wall, that is proof of overrelaxed muscles—and probably of a swayback as well. To line up perfectly, turn around and stand with your back to the wall and press the head, shoulders, hips, calves and heels against the wall. That posture is too rigid to be natural, but it lets you get the feeling of the correct lineup.

From the second wall test, you can go into a very good exercise for strengthening the important muscles. Keep the back flat against the wall, but have the heels about 4 inches out, feet parallel and knees slightly bent. Now pull up and in with the lower abdominal wall and try to push the small of the back flat against the well. Hold it. Turn the knees outward and slide down the wall as far as you can. When you have done that, try sliding up again. It's hard to do, but you get good exercise from merely trying.

Another Exercise

Or, you can go about your backstraightening this way: Lie on the back, knees bent, feet on the floor near the buttocks, and heels together. Pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles and "dig" into the floor with the small of the back. Turn the heels together. Pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles and "dig" into the floor with the small of the back. Turn the knees outward, keep heels together, and try to slide feet down on the floor without letting the small of the back come off the floor.

You can do a number of exercises in these two positions—back pressed flat against wall or floor—which will improve your stance, and at the same time give you a lovelier figure. Try the sideward bend, with arms stretched high overhead, hands clasped, to trim inches off the waist. Or, begin with arms flexed, hands in front of chest, then straighten the arms and move them from the shoulders until they are straight up over head on wall or floor. That stretches your midriff and tones arm and shoulder muscles. The more freely you can move while keeping your back exaggeratedly straight, the closer you will come to being able to hold a naturally lovely posture.

From Fireplace to Streamlined Range

Food may have been just as delicious cooked in the open fireplace as on the streamlined range, but the cooking was not as convenient. At right is shown how cooking was done at Stratford, birthplace of Robert E. Lee, Westmoreland County, Va. Below, new streamlined electric range of 1941, with one oven capable of cooking a large turkey, while biscuits bake in the other. This range simplifies surface cookery with its single set switch, which will cook food at high heat for any time up to 30 minutes, then automatically turns to desired lower heat.

New Kitchen Stove Operates Without Direction of Cook

This is one of a series of articles providing up-to-date information for the consumer.

By Martha Ellyn

Post Household Editor

WHAT energy and skill the Colonial women must have had to keep their households running with the crude kitchen equipment they had. When hot water was needed it was necessary to lift a huge kettle on and off the swinging pothooks. When soup was to be made or a pot roast to be cooked they had to be cooked by the kettle method in the open fireplace. In an oven at the side of the fireplace went on all the baking, and waffles were crisped in the waffle irons that hung far above.

Martha Ellyn

With such inconveniences our grandmothers still had time to churn butter in a dasher churn, scour the pewter plates, and polish the settle, table and rush-bottom chairs with a beeswax cloth.

If homemakers today think their way is a difficult one when they have three meals to prepare each day, they should recall the past days, and then appreciate their streamlined ranges. Each year brings improvements in our cooking equipment, making cooking easier and allowing more time for other household activities.

The 1941 "cookstove" represents the march that science has made in ranges, with the inventing of a switch on the electric stove that will turn the current on the surface unit off completely without benefit of the cook. That is a great stride from the memorable year of 1914, when the oven thermostat was introduced that made automatic oven cooking and baking possible.

Since public health in the national emergency is an important factor in the defense program, preservation of the vitamins which occur naturally in foods is a practical means of maintaining and bettering health. Vitamins and minerals are destroyed by improper cooking, which also ruins flavor.

Vitamized Cooking

When the range engineers designed this ultramodern streamlined range with the time-control switch they had in mind to make vitamized cooking easy. Vitamized cooking is based on five principles recommended by outstanding food authorities to protect vitamins, minerals and natural food flavors. These five steps are:

1. Use little or no water.
2. Start fast and cook quickly.
3. Avoid violent boiling.
4. Cook in covered utensils, without stirring.
5. Cook meat in odorless, draftless heat.

And the introduction of the single set switch marks an important forward step in the continuous process of simplifying the preparation of food. All homemakers are eager for "time savers." This innovation in surface cooking means that the housewife can now place her food on the range, set a single dial and devote the time she used to spend "watching the pot" to leisure or to other household tasks. With one setting of the switch, the food cooks at high temperature for any desired period of time up to 30 minutes, then the unit automatically turns down to a selection of any one of four lower heats. For example, vegetables can be cooked at high heat for 5 minutes, then automatically reduced to simmer heat for as long as desired.

Double Ovens

And some of the new stove models boast of two large ovens, which are equipped with an automatic outlet on the back panel. This permits a coffee maker, toaster or other device to be plugged in and operated on the range surface during meal preparation. They also have a detachable economy cooker.

One regal model has a giant-size oven, capable of baking 86 pounds of potatoes—almost a bushel and a half—at one time. Another model, with one oven, has a deep-well cooker and is equipped with a built-in combination electric timer and minute minder which rings a bell at a pre-set time to remind Mrs. Consumer to remove cooking foods. Glass oven doors also enable the housewife to watch baking and roasting operations without opening the oven. And the designers have not overlooked the small apartment house model, either, for there are conventional designed ones especially for the smaller kitchens. One feature is common to all the models—a completely inclosed high-speed unit.

'Kid' Sisters Like Plaids, Corduroy

This year's crop of kid sisters (high-school age) insists upon at least one plaid skirt, a corduroy jumper and a velveteen or corduroy jerkin. All of these are worn with long-sleeved cotton gabardine skirts or sweaters with white pique dickies on which their initials are embroidered.

Corduroy is tops for headgear, too. Favorite type is a beanie of red or green corduroy with long matching feather. In place of fur coats, many are wearing red poplin and blue gabardine reversibles. The shoe hit of the season is the side-tie oxford in brown, piped with red or green knee socks of knitted cotton string.

In place of jewelry, Eastern school girls have gone in for miniature signposts of varnished wood bearing the wearer's name, nickname, school and telephone number in alphabet soup leters.

A picture of District Red Cross Chapter activities in the last year, when an all-time high of 158,384 members were enrolled in the annual roll call, was presented yesterday at the chapter's annual meeting.

Beginning the year with $140,000 available, the chapter received $203,945 from the roll call, Treasurer Frederick P. H. Siddons reported. A special appropriation was made for war relief production. Of the roll call funds $69,787 was transmitted to national headquarters and $19,986 to five chapters in Maryland and Virginia.

A total of 4,269 passed first aid examinations and 6,166 certificates were given in water safety work, said Dr. Roy L. Sexton, chairman of First Aid and Life Saving.

Newspapers in Washington devoted 229,271 lines to Red Cross news during the past year, chairman of the public relations committee, Earl A. Nash, announced.

A total of $366,683 had been received through December 31 in drives for war relief funds, with a set goal of $300,000. The fund was raised by nearly 3,000 volunteer workers, Bruce Baird, chairman of the fund, declared.

25,007 Volunteers Worked

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of volunteer special services, announced that 9,669 uniformed volunteers worked 673,628 hours, and 15,338 other chapter volunteers gave 141,222 hours, making a grand total of 25,007 volunteers serving 814,850 hours during the year—total of 25,007 volunteers serving 814,850 hours during the year—the largest number she said, ever engaged in the District.

A total of 16,041 hours of service was donated by 166 staff assistants, stated their chairman, Mrs. Hugo Hiettig, jr.; 57,681 sewn garments were made by 2,735 volunteers who worked 179,978 hours, Mrs. J. H. Fishback, chairman of the Production Corps, reported. More than 20,000 knitted garments were turned out by 3,000 volunteers, said Mrs. James T. Nicholson, chairman of the knitting committee.

Mrs. Wallace Lind, chairman of the war relief surgical dressings committee, stated that 3,000 volunteers have made 821,987 surgical dressings of 35 different types. Local hospitals and institutions have been provided with 299,336 surgical dressings by 389 other volunteers, reported Miss Grace E. Wright, chairman of the routine surgical dressings committee.

In the Takoma Park branch 293 volunteers gave 16,444 hours of service in production, gray lady, motor corps and canteen services, reported the chairman, Mrs. Albert Lingle.

Abnormally Late Retiring Hours Cripple Social Effectiveness; Purposeful Life Requires Alert Adaptation to Daytime Activities, Says Woman

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter and I both were much interested in your discussion, last Wednesday, of the conflict between a girl of 19 and her mother, on the question of late hours for parties and "dates." In your able answer to "Harassed Mother," there was one point not mentioned, and a point that counts most with my daughter, in respect to late hours. The point is this: late hours mean loss of sleep, with consequent impairment of one's social effectiveness, an effect that cannot be avoided even by "sleeping late next day."

The whole rhythm of a purposeful life,—keyed, of necessity, to the hours of other person's normal activities,—seems to us to be upset by abnormally late hours. This applies not only to the girl who is willing to let her beaux "stay all hours," but also to the young men who take advantage of her indulgence.

A girl of 19 is, presumably, either in college or pursuing some sort of study; or she has a job; or she is leading a chiefly social life. If her activities are mainly social, your reference to the futility of assuming that pleasure-seeking is the be-all and end-all of existence, covers the case admirably. But if the girl is a student or a job-holder, her intelligence should lead her to see the personality-crippling effect of constantly lost sleep and late-morning napping.

As for my own daughter, now 21, graduated from college and professionally employed, I have never at any time issued an order as to what time of night she should come home; or for callers to leave. The curfew hour has been left to her judgment—and she decided that hour, with reference (a) to her next day's activities, and how much sleep she could afford to lose; and (b) to the possibly disturbing effect upon other members of the family, of her being late getting in or late in dismissing a beau.

My daughter has, at times, stayed out foolishly late; but she rapidly realized and outgrew the mistake; just as she soon learned, by her mistakes, how to spend her first clothes allowance to best advantage. Of course, I was vexed, occasionally, at having my rest disturbed by her late hours; but our respective viewpoints on the matter were cheerfully threshed out and reconciled, in what has been our continual effort to develop clear-thinking habits and reasonable attitudes in our mutual dealings.

It seems to me that when parental effort is focussed on the development of good judgment and personal responsibility in a child during his formative years, the danger—which "Harassed Mother" visualizes and worries about—of "physical temptation" is insignificant. I have met and talked with literally dozens of my children's friends (I have three older children, all happily married now), and believe I have had unusual opportunities to explore their ideas and attitudes. Having been honored by their confidence, I know their interests, and I would like to say that in the group growing up now—to which this girl of 19 and my 21-year-old-daughter belong—I find far more serious interest in world affairs than I found in the group which preceded it, 10 years ago.

Many of today's young people are deeply concerned with their own problems of work, family relationships, and social self-development,— as well as with racial, political, national-economic and international problems. When they sit around, talking late into the night, especially in small groups that are free from the suffocating dogmatism of their elders, it is no such themes as these. As a mother, I often find myself wishing they would get under way earlier in the evening, and reach their conclusions correspondingly earlier,—but I wouldn't want to check their "good talk."

As long as my daughter comes in from "late dates" to sit on the side of my bed and tell me a little of what it was all about; and as long as her friends come freely to our home and make me a party to their conversations, I am not going to insult either her or them by worrying (openly and audibly) about their morals.

So, to this worried mother and her non-cooperative daughter, I would say: "It is possible to get together and reach a fair compromise. But it must be based on mutual trust. On the mother's side, there is considerable lost time to be made up, but it can be done; and the girl must reach a decision as to just where she is really heading." I am hoping some of my remarks may be useful to them; and, since I am justly proud of my children's intelligent behavior, I feel there must be real value in our system of common sense cooperation. Very sincerely, E. H. W.

Chronic Fatigue Lowers Moral Resistance

DEAR E. H. W.: Thank you for this thoughtful, sensible contribution, which I feel sure will prove helpful to "Harassed Mother." Your emphasis on the social maladjustment which follows in the wake of abnormally late hours reminds me of still another point, not heretofore mentioned. Chronic fatigue (so I recall reading in a psychology text book, years ago) has a toxic effect upon the system not unlike that of alcoholic beverages—in that it tends to lower moral resistance. Thus, it well may be that there is a dangerous affinity betweeen habitual late hours and lax behavior. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Patriotic Theme Features Dress Print Designs

New York (AP).—First on every woman's winter-into-spring clothes list is "good little print." A print, women and the stores agree, looks nice under a winter coat, nice under a spring coat, and nice all by itself when the sun finally decides to shine.

You'll find a number of new developments in prints. For one thing, big prints are bigger and bolder. Their designers are bold enough to say big women can wear them, too, because the patterns have "a liquid, flowing movement that doesn't square off the larger figure."

Splashy "upholster" prints, that used to appear only in the evening, this year are made into daytime dresses. Newest looking are widely spaced rather than all-over patterns.

Designs are derived from current "inspiration" sources. A flag scroll in red and blue puts a stamp of patriotism on a white silk canton crepe.

Home Course In Cartooning

Join the ranks of the well-paid cartoonists, whose work you see everywhere these days—in newspapers, magazines, movies!

Many an amateur "doodling" funny pictures wishes he could do likewise, that he had what it takes.

But cartooning, like other arts, is mainly knowledge—knowledge that you can acquire at home.

You learn as any artist does, simple ways to analyze and start your figures, how to build them up, complete them. Only you also learn to put punch, humor into your picture by exaggerating wherever it will make things funnier. Charts and diagrams show you how.

Drawing the figure in action, you see it first as a skeleton. With just a few lines, you find, you can give your figure life—make him jump, fall, run! Up with the feet, out with the arms! Now he fairly flies over the ground!

Then in your next stage you fill in the outlines of the body, give your man shape. And finally you dress him, put expression into his face.

Want him to look foolishly anxious? Arch his eyebrows, round his eyes and pull down the corners of his mouth. And don't forget to put in clothing wrinkles where knees and elbows bend.

Soon you learn all the tricks, are grouping your figures to tell a story and are setting them off with backgrounds. The day when you are a real cartoonist is in sight.

Miss Hill to Entertain Before Show Tonight

By Hope Ridings Miller

A PREMIERE that probably will have Hollywood looking to its laurels is scheduled for tonight when social notables by the dozens turn out for the opening of the Ice-Capades of 1941 at the newest arena in Washington.

Hope Ridings Miller

Kleig lights and microphones will be trained on mink-coated Capitalites, as well as some of the celebrities from Filmland who have already come to town for the President's birthday celebrations. As is always the case in Washington—when a top-flight event is on tap—tonight's performance will be preceded by a number of dinners, with hostesses taking their guests on to the ice arena afterward. Miss Patricia Hill, post-deb daughter of Mrs. Ulihe Hill, will entertain at the Sulgrave Club, having among her guests two Hollywood celebrities, Preston Foster and Stirling Hayden.

Others in the company will be Miss Edith Wright, Miss Emily French Myers, Miss Dorothy Shelton, Mrs. Robert Foster, Miss Mary Theresa Norris, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Countess Cassini, Waverly Taylor, Capt. Fred Roy, Lowell Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Igor Cassini, Juddy Bowles, Meade Patrick, William C. Shelton, jr., William Merriam, John Galliher and Randall Hagner.

Miss Eleanor Meem and Jock Merriam will join the company after dinner and go on with them to the evening's performance at the Uline Ice Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast.

PARTIES FOR Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady are taking over a good part of the social calendar these days . . . and will, until that popular couple leave for the West Coast early next month. The retiring Assistant Secretary of State who, I understand, still goes to his former office regularly each morning—he just can't get out of the habit all at once—will be off by plane on February 2 for San Francisco to take over his new duties as president of the American President Lines. Mrs. Grady and her daughter, Patricia, will leave about the same time by boat (an American President liner, of course) from New York and sail westward through the Panama Canal. Patricia expects to return to Washington within a month, and the Grady apartment at 2139 Wyoming Avenue will continue to be Capital headquarters for the family.

The Gradys were feted at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Adrien Busick at the Shoreham last night; and earlier yesterday, Mrs. Grady was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Robert Carr at the same hotel.

Gathered in for the latter party were a number of friends that the honoree first met in Geneva, several wives of State Department officials and a few other close friends. The red tulips centering the long table matched Mrs. Carr's perky hat, which was worn with a black frock. Mrs. Grady, having made up her mind to be the "tailored type" for a while, was smartly attired in a black suit, set off with a frilly white blouse and a wide-brimmed hat turned up on one side.

AMONG THE GUESTS were Mrs. Harry Hawkins, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Frederick Livesey, Mrs. J. E. Saugstad and Mrs. John Fuqua, all of whom are from the State Department contingent. Others there were Mrs. Loyle Morrison, Mrs. William Taylor, Mrs. Frank Waring, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Reefer Tirana, whose husband formerly was at Geneva with the League of Nations; Mrs. Louis Lorwin, who came here from Geneva, where her husband was connected with the International Labor Office; Mrs. Benjamin Dorfman, Miss Patrica Grady and Mrs. Frank Marsh.

Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller will entertain this afternoon at a tea in honor of the Gradys, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck have cards out for a tea on Saturday for the same couple. But if you're one of those fortunate enough to receive an invitation to the Hornbeck party, don't go with the expectation of seeing Orson Wells there—as some columnist promised the other day. Nobody was more surprised than Mrs. Hornbeck herself to pick up a newspaper the other day and find that "the wonder man of the theater" was supposed to be present. "Why, I don't even know him!" she said.

BEWARE NOW OF EPIDEMIC COLDS!

Here's Some Good Time-Tested Advice

With folks all around suffering with contagious colds, be just as careful as you can—and you may avoid a lot of sickness, trouble and worry.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Beware of wet feet and drafts. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SIGN OF A SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION... put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today.

Final List of Stars for Birthday Celebrations; December Elects Six Likely Screen Champions; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WITH EVERYTHING SET, so far as such things can be, the mobility of the picture industry being what it is, a comparatively last minute roundup of the Hollywood celebrities who will be in Washington Thursday night for the President's Birthday Celebrations in behalf of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis is in order.

BELL

The complete list of visiting luminaries, confirmed with and by the Entertainment Committee, under the chairmanship of Andrew R. Kelley, now includes Wallace Beery and his daughter, Carol Ann; Deanna Durbin, Lana Turner, Preston Foster, Robert Young, Charlotte Greenwood, George Raft, Anne Shirley, Jean Hersholt, Wayne Morris, five-year-old Carolyn Lee, Constance Moore, Lynn Bari, Kay Aldridge, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Fadiman—not from Hollywood—Stirling Hayden, Benny Goodman and His Orchestra and Red Skelton.

In addition, Tommy Harmon, the gridiron hero, and Alice Marble and other professional tennis stars will attend the all-star banquet at the Willard Thursday evening preceding the later circulatory festivities.

This is quite a list on any man's scratch pad—or woman's either.

All of the Hollywood notables will appear at each of the special midnight performances scheduled for the Earle and Capitol theaters Thursday night, beginning at 11:30. Over and above that, each house will present the combined stage shows of both in addition to its own screen bill. These elaborated programs, it is estimated, will consume between 2½ and 3 hours of running time. Tickets for these midnight revels may be reserved in advance at a flat price of $1.50 per ticket for all seats. Red Skelton, Washington favorite, will act as master of ceremonies of the Earle revue, moving the entire unit to the Capitol stage during the course of the gay goings-on. The Capitol show, at the same time, will shift to the Earle, or something like that. Anyhow, the patrons of either house will see both. So now you know.

In all the hubbub of the year-end selections of the "Ten Best" this, that and the other of filmdom's 1940 product, it has been a considerable stretch of time now since any month's "Box-Office Champions" have been published. According to the Motion Picture Herald's bona fide check of key city box-office statements throughout the country, the six champion film releases for December were "Arizona," "Bitter Sweet," "The Letter," "North West Mounted Police," "The Theif of Bagdad" and "Tin Pan Alley."

That is a list with which the Capital will find it difficult to quibble. All of the pictures for which the cash customers across the continent spent the most money at the ticket wickets have been seen and approved here, with the single exception of "Arizona" which, as I understand it, will be coming along to the Earle screen next month.

The list also betrays a remarkable public catholicity of taste as among the various major producing companies, registering one winner each for Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warner Brothers, Paramount, United Artists and Twentieth Century-Fox. The directors were a pretty cagey lot, too—Wesley Ruggles, Woody Van Dyke, William Wyler, Cecil B. DeMille, Alexander Korda and Walter Lang.

It is none of the business of this column and we are not taking sides in a lamentable Nation-wide controversy—at least, not in the public prints—but that Saturday night ASCAP hour over Station WINX made it strikingly evident that it will take BMI a round three decades to compile such a wealth of well-loved music as ASCAP is able to pour out on the ether at a moment's notice. Even with such distinguished artists as George M. Cohan, Gene Buck, president of ASCAP; Deems Taylor, Joe Howard, Irving Berlin and Benny Fields, supported by a large mixed chorus and full orchestra, appearing on the program, there seemed to be a tinge of self-defense, if not defeatism, in the whole thing. But the boys certainly had the music you love to hear. Only I wish they hadn't "begged" quite so much.

Postscript-to-the-Man-Out-in-Georgetown Note

How's about giving the sun a workout the next two or three days?

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 27.

Just after I've been signing in the column for a theater showing Westerns, so I could have a glimpse of the great open spaces when the old grindstone prevents me from traveling to them, the Teleview Theater was casting about for a new policy, and they liked my idea, too. So Friday night they're having a grand opening, with a rootin'-tootin' parade down Hollywood Boulevard, including our prominent cowboys, and they'll show "Melody Ranch" and "Robin Hood of the Pecos." From now on we can see the Hopalong Cassidys, Gene Autrys and Roy Rogers pictures, etc., without having to drive clear out to the frontiers, as has been necessary heretofore.

HOPPER

What a strange way to cement a friendship! But that's what happened when Joan Crawford spent a whole day slapping Sylvia Fairbanks' face in tests for Joan's latest, "A Woman's Face." In one scene Joan had to snatch the pearls from around her neck, and she did it with such realism that she tore Sylvia's gown all the way down the front, and was so horrified she turned to George Cukor and said, "I hope the studio will pay for this." Whereupon Sylvia replied, "I wouldn't think of it. I'm too happy about the test."

If the ASCAP war is settled in the near future you can lay it to the initiative of Hollywood songsters like Bing Crosby, Tony Martin, Rudy Vallee, Judy Garland. All those who sing on the air are about to strike unless the situation changes so that they can sing the songs written for them and which the public wants. "Jeanie's light brown hair" has turned so gray it's now mildewed.

The coming Greek benefit is called "an investment in democracy." The picture which goes out with the ads was cut right out of a foreign newsreel by that ace advertising man, Frank Whitbeck.

If the romance between Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville isn't serious, their mothers certainly make it look that way.

The Moment Seems a Bit Tense

A Federal director, who was one of young Herlands' classmates at Columbia, telephoned him at the courthouse in connection with official business . . . "I hope you're feeling well, in spite of the weather, Herb," said the caller, after he had transacted his business . . . "Are you paying for this call personally?" asked Herlands . . . Of course not," said his classmate . . . "In that case," Herlands told him, "we'd better not discuss that subject."

THREE song-writing notes: Jimmy Walker's newest song is called "Lazy Lips." Bundles for Britain will receive all the profits from "A'Knittin' A Mitten for Britain," by Max and Nathaniel Lief. Patricia Kelly, the reporter, and her lawyer-husband, Kenneth Krippine, have sold eight songs to BMI, the first one called "Moon Over County Jail."

Vallee is vice president of Viso-Graph . . . The Russian edition of Hemingway's "The Fifth Column and the First 48 Stories" is reduced to "The First 46 Stories." Two of the stories were yanked.

"I don't know how they did it," said the puzzled Bella later, "We had an old Russian character, with an old shirt and a very long beard. And now, suddenly, it turns out to be Hedy Lamarr!"

Trans-Lux

Pictures of the Inaugural, the President's speech and the parade are the big magnets at the Trans-Lux this week. However, there are other very good and unusual features in the program.

Deeply affecting is Quentin Reynolds' "Christmas Under Fire" illustrating England's will to celebrate the benign holiday—even in shattered homes and bomb shelters—under the horrible suspense and tension of threatening attack. "A Fish Is Born" is another remarkable short of close-up pictures of the incubation period in the life of trout, perch and pike. A Popular Science release illustrates the training of pigeons for Army duty, the development of a fabric that repels fire and makes it possible for stains—ink and others—to be flushed off with water.

Highlights among the news pictorials are views of Britain "Fortifying Iceland;" British mechanized units active in Egypt; British diplomats reviewing Turkey's war forces; Athens celebrating victories over the Italians; Wendell Willkie off to England; a group of U. S. defense activities.

Mme. Daruschka .....Olga Baclanova
Julia Naughton .....Audrey Ridgwell

In her second play, "Claudia," accorded its metropolitan premiere in the National Theater last night, Rose Franken has achieved a twofold triumph in playwriting. Skilfully translating incidents from her popular stories of Claudia and David Naughton and Claudia's mother, Mrs. Brown, into terms of the stage, she has contrived a three-act comedy-drama which for two-thirds of its length is crisply, appealingly and occasionally ambiguously amusing and in its final period so true and so sound in its contemplation of life's sternest and most bitter realities as to be timeless and unithat Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" versal, in the manner and the spirit was timeless and universal.

Mrs. Franken has not concerned herself greatly with conventional "plot": What she has done is to compile a series of episodes in the lives of a young couple, living on a newly acquired farm 70 miles out of New York, in Connecticut, and make them instruments of character building that transform a child-bride, still clinging to her mother's apron strings, into a suddenly mature young matron capable of meeting and solving the most profound problems the intricate loom of life can weave. During the first two acts, one wonders what devilish machinations some of the characters introduced into the Naughton household may be up to. They are up to none, as it turns out, but each in turn, in the light of the illuminating and deeply moving last act has contributed something of value to the awakening of self-reliant womanhood in a little scatterbrain who, until then, has been only a child married to a patient and adoring husband. Life and death are the implements with which the author molds the tenderest moments in her play, just as they were in "Our Town". Claudia discovers that she is to have a baby at almost the same moment she learns that eminent specialists have decreed that her mother has only a short time to live.

Lest all this give the impression that "Claudia" is a solemn and lugubrious stage piece, heavily weighted with the gloomier aspects of young love and its approach to life, Miss Franken should be immediately vindicated by the emphatic statement that her play is primarily dedicated to brisk and brittle fun that at times reaches high points of hilarity and now and again expresses itself with such unexpected frankness as to be just a shade startling. There is nothing stuffy, self-conscious or smug about "Claudia." It is warm, human and enormously effective entertainment. And it is beautifully and efficiently played. Producer John Golden has chosen his cast with characteristic discretion and infallible judgment.

The pivotal and vital figure in "Claudia," of course, is Claudia, played with consummate intelligence and taste, both in its most frivolous and most serious moments, by Dorothy McGuire, whom Washington will remember for a similar conrtibution to Mr. Wilder's prize winnifg drama already mentioned. Donald Cook, last seen here with Gertrude Lawrence in "Skylark," if memory serves, is the substantial, practical and understanding David, and Frances Starr, never more perfectly imbued with the spirit of a role, is the Mrs. Brown who sees her daughter grow into valiant and comforting maturity, where a mother's deepest concern may end.

Lesser roles—but still important once the author's purpose is revealed—are portrayed with humor and high color by Olga Baclanova, John Williams and Audrey Ridgwell. Adrienne Gessner and Frank Tweddell, remembered from "You Can't Take It With You," complete the admirable cast with two fine studies of grateful and faithful servitors on the Naughton farm.

Donald Oenslager has contributed a single setting that adds a touch of hominess to a spirited, satisfying and thoroughly delightful evening in front of the footlights.

Ark Royal Still In There Fighting

More than once reported sunk by German and Italian bombers, the Ark Royal, Britain's 22,000-ton aircraft carrier, still asserts her power in the Mediterranean.

These photos from Paramount News show the mighty warship as she once again withstands attack and fights back.

A 3,000-mile network of schools whose business it is to turn out fighting airmen is Canada's sprawling new wartime industry.

Thirty-three schools are scattered over an area from Halifax to Vancouver and during good flying weather the Canadian sky from coast to coast is dotted with training planes.

Pan American Annex Would Block Virginia Avenue

Photo-diagram (right) shows how proposed construction of an annex (solid rectangular line) to the Pan American Union building would block Virginia Avenue. Traffic on Virginia Avenue, which gives commercial vehicles a direct route to the industrial area of Georgetown and serves as a main entrance to Rock Creek Park from the downtown area, would be bottle-necked at Nineteenth Street. Under the proposal, these two streets would be re-routed, as shown with broken lines, to give the Pan American Union a site for its contemplated annex.

Original plans called for the structure to be built on the triangle in front of the Interior Building, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets, but this, Secretary Ickes discovered, would obstruct the vista from his office (arrow).

So today there is a bill before Congress to change the streets, create a new bottle-neck for Washington traffic.

Adding Injury to Insult

Benjamin H. Vernon, 41, of 811 Quincy Street Northwest, was taken to Doctors Hospital last night with a severe jaw injury.

He said a gang of boys struck him with snowballs at Georgia Avenue and Quincy Street Northwest. When he approached to "speak to them," one boy struck him with his first, knocking him down.

Now We Know—Who Yehudi Is

Almost everyone by now knows that Washingtonians can obtain the latest weather news by dialing Weather 1212, but a few slant was given to it yesterday when a Chevy Chase man's sub-deb daughter told him the younger set got the same result by dialing Ye-hudi. The explanation is that any combination starting WE (or YE, or XE) gets the weather bureau.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutts

Civil Service Commission yesterday placed its confidential files under close guard following the arrest of Harlan W. Crandall, 29-year-old assistant clerk, in connection with the improper removal of its records. New regulations also were adopted to govern the coming and going of employes as well as strangers. Hereafter, no stranger or visitor will be permitted in the rooms where the files are stored. No employe will be permitted to take bundles or packages in and out of the commission buildings without approval of the guard or division chief.

Commission officials, a bit jittery by the amazing work of Crandall, who was ordered suspended, were relieved to learn that its highly important roster of scientists and specialists was intact and had not been touched. The new regulations were made effective at the Atlantic Building where the roster is being compiled.

Incidentally, the scientific roster contains information that would have been much more valuable to an unfriendly foreign power than the information carried on the personnel information sheets which Crandall is alleged to have turned over to outsiders. The commission, in cooperation with the National Resources Planning Board, several months ago, called on all scientists and other highly trained technicians in the country to voluntarily fill out questionnaires on their qualifications and experience. The roster already has been used to supply the Army, Navy and other defense agencies with men who possess unusual qualifications.

Germany, England and France are among the countries that have established similar rosters. Englishmen say the roster has proved to be invaluable to their country. The commission has more than 500,000 persons on the roster and many of them have volunteered their services to the Government. Albert Einstein is one of the volunteers.

Small boys out in the Northwest, it seems, are unwittingly sabotaging the Bonneville Power Administration which has become a vital national defense plant. The agency yesterday issued a warning to the youngsters to stop climbing their transmission poles and throwing slings over the wires. The lines carry 230,000 volts, the most powerful in the world. The press release is one of the most unusual ever issued by the Government.

Allan Miller has been appointed acting information director at Commerce. He succeeds Fred Polangin . . . Sam Gompers, Labor Department chief clerk who is the son of the founder of the A. F. of L., yesterday celebrated his forty-ninth wedding anniversary . . . Several persons have asked why the FBI was called into the Crandall case. First, the Civil Service Commission asked for an inquiry. Secondly, William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to the President in charge of personnel, some time ago ordered department and agency heads to turn over to the FBI all serious charges against persons already on the Federal pay roll. The Commission investigates persons before and shortly after they have been hired.

Entries are pouring into the Federal Employes Council which will send two Government workers to St. Petersburg, Fla., for a week's vacation. The contest is simple enough. All a Federal employe has to do to enter is to write a letter to the council in care of WJSV and tell what you do after work and what the council should do to promote welfare and recreation activity among Government workers.

Morris Horowitz wrote that he spends his spare time teaching his children about the country they live in through books and visiting places. He adds that there are too many "lonely girls and boys in Washington and the council should do something about it. Sara Moore, ICC employe, wants the council to promote the building of more tennis courts and Ralph Hopkins, War Department employe, suggests the council should foster "cruise style" recreation where Government employes could go and get acquainted with one another.

Civil Service Exams: Junior Stenographer (males only), $1,440; Artist-Designers, $1,620 to $2,600; Associate and Technical Editor, $2,600 to $3,200; Pharmacologist, $2,600 to $4,600; Junior Technologist, $2,600, and Associate Chemist/Petrographer, $3,200.

Flu And Increase in Other Ills Cause Nurse Shortage in D.C.

"THEY NEED YOU"—These three nurses are attending the convention of nurses at the Willard Hotel to give information concerning the nursing service. Left to right—Anna Danyo, United States Navy nurse attached to Naval Hospital; Dorothy Cram, of the United States Army Nursing Corps, and Catherine DeCourt, Red Cross Army Reserve Corps

The greatest demand for medical assistance on record has resulted in a shortage of nurses in the District this week, delegates to a District Graduate Nurses Association Convention at the Willard Hotel were told yesterday.

Many of the city's 1,300 private-duty nurses have been called for duty in hospitals where the flu epidemic and increases in other diseases have taxed facilities, according to Miss Edith Beattie, executive secretary of the association.

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Earle, educational director of the St. Elizabeths Hospital nursing school, condemned the emergency practice of nurses in turning over patients to "subsidiary workers" after crisis periods had passed.

Other members of a discussion panel pointed out that this has become necessary because of insufficient nursing personnel. "It is better to have patients cared for by subsidiary workers than to have no attendant at all," according to Miss Ruth E. Parks, private nurse.

Speakers at the afternoon discussion, who examined technical problems facing District nurses, included Mrs. Eugenia K. Spalding, of Catholic University, chairman; Mrs. M. Esther McClain, of Providence Hospital, secretary; Mrs. Frederick Murphy, Mrs. Marion Ferguson, of the D. C. Health Department; Sister Mary Ruth, of Catholic University; Mrs. Elizabeth D. Coleman, registrar of the association; Mrs. Martha Aiken, of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, and Mrs. Zula Cobb.

Miss Mary Beard, director of the Red Cross Nursing Service, commended the spirit with which the Selective Service Act is being carried out and urged more cooperation between registered nurses and the Red Cross to promote national defense, at a Red Cross luncheon which opened the two-day convention.

Work of nurses in industry was discussed by Miss Pearl McIver, senior nursing consultant of the United States Public Health Service, at a buffet supper and meeting of the association's public health section last night.

Emotional and mental problems in everyday life were examined at a symposium on mental hygiene last night in the Willard. Speakers were Dr. Paul F. Dickens, clinical professor of medicine at George Washington University, and Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan, president of the William A. White, Psychiatric Foundation. Presiding was Mrs. Dorothy Edwards, assistant supervisor of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Today's session of the convention representing 2,350 District nurses will feature business meetings at 10:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., followed by the second mental hygiene symposium at 3 p. m. and the annual banquet at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Townsend Presents Recital by American Artists

By Rav C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents Rose Bampton, soprano, and Leonard Stokes, barytone, Monday morning in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. Accompanist, Brooks Smith.

At her 121st Musical Morning yesterday, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend offered her subscribers an enjoyable joint recital by two American singers, Rose Bampton and Leonard Stokes, who were accompanied by a third native musician, Brooks Smith. The program was unfortunately weak in American composers, otherwise the occasion might have been notable for its home-grown quality. It was naturally Miss Bampton who carried off the honors of the recital, thanks to her experienced artistry and her superior attainments.

Making his first appearance here, Mr. Stokes had the disadvantage of contrast with so opulent and lustrous a voice as Miss Bampton's. His barytone has an agreeable timbre and he uses it with knowledgable skill in phrasing, but its color has not yet been fully developed, and its resonance is still tentative. What impressed one most in his singing was his musical instnict, his excellent taste and his artistic conscience. His musicianship is earnest and sincere, and he resorts to no treks of technique for the sake of effect.

He enlivened his first group with a novelty, Charles Lemaire's seventeenth century "Chanson a manger" in praise of eating, which, as he remarked to the audience, was a refreshing change from "drinking songs. This was companioned by three operatic excerpts: Mozart's "Deh vieni alla finestra," Messager's "La maison grise" and Massenet's "Vision fugitive." In his second group he combined Horsman's "The Evening Cloud," Victor Hely-Hutchison's Handelian parody, "Old Mother Hubbard," and Harry Burleigh's arrangement of "I Don't Feel Noways Tired."

One has not yet ceased regretting Miss Bampton's change from contralto to soprano tessitura, particularly when her warm and somber tones sound as beautifully as they did in Granados' "La maja dolorosa." There were lovely colors also in her reading of "Del cabello mas sutil" by Obraders. But in Falla's "Seguidilla Murciana" and Massnet's "Il est doux, il est bon," the unsteadiness of the high notes was a detraction.

Her second group was distinguished by Sibelius' unfamiliar "Tryst," which she sung in English, and by a brilliant new song, "Ocean Idyl," from the pen of the accompanist. These were followed by Carpenter's "When I Bring You Colored Toys," and the aria, "Cieli azzuri" from "Aida."

The recitalists opened the program together with an Italian version of the duet, "Bel Maennern" from Mozart's "Die Zauberfloete," and closed it with "Dunque io son" from Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia." At the piano Brooks Smith was a rhythmically precise adjutant with clear phrasing, but he needs to soften the crispness of his tone before he becomes the perfect accompanist.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents Monday night the third in a series of concerts devoted to the chamber music of Johannes Brahms. Artists: Pro Arte String Quartet (Antonio Brosa, Laurent Halleux, Germain Prevost and C. Warwick Evans), Gustave Langenus, clarinet; Gunnar Johansen, piano. Program: Sonata in F minor for clarinet and piano, String Quartet in A minor, Quintet in B minor for clarinet and strings.

Attendance last evening at the third Brahms concert in Coolidge Auditorium in the Library of Congress again made evident that a capacity audience is synonomous with a chamber music program on Capitol Hill. Those unfortunate enough to leave their reserved tickets at home or to arrive late find their seats occupied and have to be content with chairs in the outer corridor and in the Whittall Pavilion. To say that all those present were confirmed and ardent admirers of Brahms would probably be an error, but they were unquestionably enthusiastic pursuers of good music and excellent artists.

If the star system were in force, Gustave Langenus would have been the special attraction on this occasion, for that admirable clarinetist had the place of distinction in two of the programmed works. He and Gunnar Johansen played the F minor sonata for clarinet and piano, and his instrument colored the B minor quintet for clarinet and strings. His infallible skill and lucent phrasing contributed the indispensable part of the evening's enjoyment, even though the program also included the A minor string quartet.

The clarinet sonata proved that tonal contrast can be as effective as tonal blending in pleasurable sensations. While continually at variance in timbres, the instruments discourse so consentiently their dialogue has the piquancy of a friendly argument. Disagreement does not entail dissonance in this case nor does it imply acrimonious controversy.

Friendships have been responsible for a large number of compositions which would not have been written had not fate brought congenial persons together. Brahms not only esteemed the clarinet playing of Richard Muehlfeld, but also held him in affectionate regard. To this relation alone we owe four of Brahms' works, the most beautiful of which is the quintet in B minor. In this appealing music Brahms laid aside his austerity and wrote with an unusual sensuousness as though romanticism had won him over completely.

Citizens Ask Full-Time Traffic Judge

Lincoln Park Unit Also Calls for Reduction of Court Delays in Resolution

Appointment of a full-time traffic judge to handle traffic cases exclusively, designation of more of the city's narrower streets for one-way travel and reduction of court delays were called for last night in a resolution adopted by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association.

The resolution embodied 12 suggestions drafted by the association's public utilities committee for reducing the city's toll of auto deaths.

Other recommendations called for 100 additional Metropolitan policemen, 34 of which would be assigned to East Washington, blamed many auto accidents on failure of drivers to reduce speed at intersections, urged prosecution of violators to the fullest possible extent and asked for strengthening of traffic laws by increasing penalties and closing existing loopholes.

To permit safer and speedier movement of traffic on one-way streets, the resolution also called for restriction of parking to one side of narrow streets.

The association, meeting in the Kingsman School, Fourteenth and E Streets Northeast, announced the following winners of its Christmas decorations contest: F. A. Tolson, first; G. E. Cornell, second, and Charles Foster, third.

Northwest Council

Behavior of delicate instruments in the Bureau of Standards is less important than traffic conditions on Van Ness Street, the Northwest Citizens Council agreed last night.

Meeting at the home of Godfrey L. Munter, 3637 Patterson Street Northwest, the council expressed opposition to closing Van Ness Street at the bureau on the grounds it would create another traffic problem and necessitate rerouting of buses.

The council also voted to call on Congress to grant appointments to West Point and Annapolis to the District on the same basis as the States.

Approval was given to the Overton plan of Federal contribution to the District's support, and proposals for a crosstown bus line and a rifle range at Western High School.

Mid-City

The Mid-City Citizens Association expressed concern over the District's traffic toll last night and called on traffic judges to impose "extreme penalties" for speeding and jail sentences for reckless and drunken driving.

Opposition was voted at the meeting, held at Thomson School, Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, to proposed exemption from taxation of property owned by the National Society of Colonial Dames at New Hampshire Avenue and N Street Northwest.

The association voted support of crosstown bus service and registered a protest against double parking of buses on Indiana Avenue Northwest between Sixth and Seventh Streets.

Georgetown

The Georgetown association last night indorsed the liquor recommendations which include extension of the Saturday night curfew until 2 a. m. and closing of bars Sunday nights.

Georgetown citizens also favored the Military Road route for the proposed crosstown bus and opposed the suggested total use of natural gas for the District.

William S. Conant reported no plans for the development of the Bliss estate, at Thirty-first and R Streets Northwest, into a 27-acre public park.

North Capitol

Use of idle D. C. highway funds to place "badly needed" traffic lights at 140 Washington street intersections was urged last night by the North Capitol Citizens Association.

Recent appropriations have allowed for only 25 new traffic lights annually while road funds have shown surpluses, Baxter Smith, chairman of the streets committee, pointed out.

The association inducted 60 new citizens into membership, an all-time high.

Members went on record as favoring the proposed crosstown bus, and recommended the Park Road route across Rock Creek Park.

President Lauds Aims of National Christian Mission

Expressing the hope that it would "hasten the revival of Christianity," President Roosevelt last night commended the objectives of the National Christian Mission, which opens here Sunday.

In an answer to the letter sent him by Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, general local mission chairman, explaining the project's purposes, Mr. Roosevelt said, in part:

"I am glad to reiterate the statement which I have made many times before, that a real revival of religion is what this country most needs—that in such a revival we would find a solution of all our problems, whether political, economic or social.

"I like, therefore, the emphasis which your group places on the three alternatives which confront society; the collapse of civilization, the acceptance of the new paganism, or the revival of Christianity."

Scout Institute to Open

The annual Institute of Scouting will open at 7:30 p. m. today at Macfarland Junior High School with the Rev. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich as the speaker. Courses in the elements of Scouting, troop camping and equipment making will be included. Meetings will be held each Tuesday evening, during a 10-week period, at the school.

32 More Child Welfare Aides Asked for D.C.

An appropriation to add 32 child welfare workers to the Board of Public Welfare and creation of a recreation board to supplant the present Department of Playgrounds and Community Centers were urged last night in resolutions adopted by the Monday Evening Club.

The club voted to "indorse and actively sponsor" the proposed bill to create the recreation board, after a report from its recreation committee was read by Hugo Wolter. The report called the present administrative organization for recreation "cumbersome."

The club adopted a resolution from its child welfare committee requesting Congress to provide 12 workers for the protective service and 20 workers for the foster care service, under the Board of Public Welfare. Miss Lucia Murchison, who presented the resolution, pointed out that the recommendation was in line with the Citizens Advisory Committee report.

Dr. Robert K. Lamb, special investigator for the House Tolan Committee for study of migration of destitute citizens, said in an address that while "factory whistles are blowing" in the defense program, the migrant problem "has become more rather than less serious in some sections."

4 Scout Heads Of D. C. Get Highest Award

Four Washington Boy Scout leaders, each with approximately 20 years of scouting service behind him, last night were presented the highest of all scout honors—the Silver Beaver Award for outstanding service to boyhood.

The scout chiefs, who were honored at the annual meeting of the National Capital Area Council in the Willard Hotel, are: Arthur Hellen, member of the council's executive board; David Lockling, scout district commissioner of the Arlington district; Fred Tilp, skipper of the Sea Scout ship Corinthian, and Horace L. Guiney, veteran scoutmaster of Troop 666.

Dr. E. K. Fretwell, of the Scouts' national executive board, who came from New York for the meeting, told 250 present that the fundamentals of scouting are unexcelled in teaching men and boys how to live in a democratic society. Scouting also helps retain the family group, he added, which is basic to American life.

New council officers, elected at the conclave, are: President, Capt. Chester Wells; vice presidents, Dr. Paul Bartsch, Ralph A. Van Orsdel and Ernest H. Daniel; acting Scout commissioner, Dr. Bartsch; treasurer, William B. Willard; assistant treasurer, Caesar L. Aiello, and secretary, Linn C. Drake.

Four Driven Out By P Street Fire

A two-alarm fire in the basement of a rooming house at 1733 P Street Northwest drove four residents into near-freezing weather yesterday as firemen worked almost an hour to quell a blaze originating from a coal furnace.

Rufus Ledman, 65, who rents the building, discovered the fire when smoke began to curl from the registers. The furnishings in the house were not insured, he said.

Of all the Hollywood celebrities here to attend the President's birthday celebration, "Red" Skelton, the popular comedian of "Flight Command" and a favorite with Washington audiences, will probably have the biggest assignment.

He will act as master of ceremonies at all the hotels during Thursday night's festivities and in addition will take over introduction duties at the "Gold Plate" breakfast at the Carlton. "Red" and his attractive blonde wife arrived in town last night after a three-day air journey from California. They were delayed by inclement weather; Skelton cracked that he could have made as good time by dog sled.

Mrs. Roosevelt's scheduled arrival at each ball during the night was announced yesterday. She will go first to the Washington Hotel at 10 p. m., then to the Hamilton, Mayflower, Shoreham and reach Wardman Park at 11:15 p. m. to hear the President's address and help cut the huge birthday cake.

Arrivals today include Wallace Beery and Kay Aldrich, and the arrangements committee received word that Charlotte Greenwood would arrive tomorrow.

Those movie stars already here spent a leisurely day yesterday—sightseeing and dodging autograph hunters. (Leisurely if that's the way you like life's tempo.)

Carolyn Lee, child film player, ill since Saturday, was taken to Children's Hospital yesterday. Carolyn's mother, Mrs. Warren Copp, and the company's representative, C. N. Odell, became alarmed when the child's fever failed to abate.

As usual, the birthday celebration will begin with an official "welcoming" of the stars in Commissioner Hazen's office at 11 a. m. Thursday. The visiting dignitaries will be received at the White House at 1 p. m., will be feted at a cocktail party at the Willard Hotel at 6 p. m. and will be dined at 7 p. m.

"Red" Skelton, who for several seasons has "wowed" Washington theatergoers with his rapid-fire gags, broke down and admitted last night that Mrs. Skelton was his most severe critic. In fact, he added, she writes most of his material.

Skelton is another "third-termer." His appearance at the functions Thursday night will mark his third as "Birthday Ball" master of ceremonies.

"Red" said he liked working in motion pictures—except "it's so darn quiet on a movie set."

"Do you know," he quipped, "sometimes it is so quiet I can almost hear my option drop."

Laurence Melchoir, Metropolitan Opera barytone, will be the only soloist at the All-Star dinner opening the celebration at the Willard Hotel, the arrangements committee announced. He will sing the "Star-Spangled Banner," starting the banquet.

Homes to Get 27% of Light Rate Slash

P.U.C. Rejects Giving Business Firms 93 Per Cent Of 1941 Reduction

Washington's home-owners are to share, as they have in other years, in 1941 electric rate reductions, the Public Utilities Commission ruled yesterday.

Riley E. Elgen, P. U. C. chairman, turned down a proposal of the Potomac Electric Power Co. to give commercial firms about 93 per cent of the coming rate reductions, and ordered them instead to prepare new schedules giving residential power consumers 27 per cent of the cut in rates at an estimated saving of $90,991.17.

The amount available for these savings was fixed by the P. U. C. at $337,004.32 last Friday, but yesterday's hearing in the District Building raised a new quirk about what the figure represented.

The question, left open for further negotiation, was how to bring the schedule into line with the "sliding scale" rule that governs Washington's rate fixing.

Pepco officials argued that, under the sliding scale agreement and the PUC's interpretation of it, $42,000 would be cut off the District's light and power bill this year without any rate reduction.

Key to this phenomenon, it was explained, is the fact that the rates charged in January, 1941, are those fixed for 1940, while the electric bills of January, 1940, were based on the 1939 rates. Since 1940 rates are lower than 1939 rates, enough to produce an estimated revenue drop of $42,000 this month, it was urged that this amount be counted part of the $337,004 saving ordered for this year.

Commissioner David McCoach and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, sitting as P. U. C. members, questioned whether the $42,000 could be counted toward the 1941 rate reductions. Chairman Elgen, however, in calling for new rate schedules, left the way open for further study of the $337,004 figure.

Harold A. Brooks, vice president and commercial manager for Pepco, presented this summary of the dollar savings to be effected for consumers by the company's proposed rate reductions:

Residential consumers, a saving of $13,7[illegible], without any change in rates, but resulting from the fact that this January's rates are lower than those of last January.

Commercial consumers, a saving of $314,959.

A saving of $8,359 to Maryland consumers, as a result of shifting the firm's boundaries for some rural and suburban electric service rates.

A revenue reduction of $3,065 through a new power contract with the Maryland Light & Power Co.

Brooks told the commission that commercial schedule E was the company's most profitable class of business and that the amount to be deducted this year could be absorbed there "and still leave it the most profitable class of business."

Chairman Elgen declared, however, that last year's reductions of $575,000 had been divided between residential and commercial consumers on the basis of the amount of electric power used by each.

Landscape Architects Hear FWA Chief

Federal Works Agency Administrator John M. Carmody told the American Society of Landscape Architects last night that American artists and architects must "arrive at the stage where they think poor people have the right to beauty."

He addressed the annual dinner of the organization at the Washington Hotel.

In a discussion of American art and architecture, Carmody quoted Edward Bruce, chief of the Section of Fine Arts of the Public Buildings Administration, as saying of the Mellon Art Gallery, shortly to be opened: "The pink marble on the outside makes me sick. It's so dark on the inside it's like a mausoleum. There will be no living art in it."

Construction of prefabricated houses is more expensive than building regular houses, Gilbert S. Underwood, of the Public Buildings Administration, declared at a round-table discussion. He asserted that houses costing $2,000 for construction under national defense plans are the equivalent of houses which were built at costs of $5,000 during the World War.

Lieut. Col. W. D. Styer, office of the quartermaster general, said that while the fundamental job of the Army's construction division is "to shelter young men being trained as combat troops," nevertheless "esthetic values have not been overlooked."

W. H. Harrison, director, the Construction Section of the Production Division, the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense, spoke on "National Defense" at a closed luncheon session.

Wilbur H. Simonson, an architect with the Public Roads Administration since 1929, was named recipient of an honorary fellowship.

S. Herbert Hare, of Kansas City, was elected president of the society; Philip H. Edwards, of Ames, Iowa, vice president, and Markley Stevenson, of Philadelphia, re-elected secretary. Sessions will continue through tomorrow.

Goldstein Beats Wild Bill McDowell in Brawl

Fans See Weird Scrap in Arena Ring; Buffalo Is Extended Winning Semifinal

By Al Hailey

You can come out from behind that pretzel barrel now, pardner, it's all over—Yussell Goldstein is the winner.

Yussell is the winner by a unanimous decision over Wild Bill McDowell in the roughest eight-round backroom brawl seen in Turner's Arena in five years.

It would have been no surprise to see a beer bottle come skittering through the air, so reminiscent was the last night's battle of the days when barroom brawls were the order. A scanty crowd of 700 formed the cheering section and sat prepared for anything after both boys did a flying somersault through the ropes in a bit of roughhouse that caused Referee Eddie LaFond to warn Wild Bill.

McDowell, an 8-5 underdog in the betting, made it a mad scramble from the start. He butted constantly and Goldstein retaliated by giving Wild Willie everything but the hot foot.

Wild Bill Baffled

It was the thirty-first straight victory for Goldstein, who went undefeated in 1940 and knocked out 14 men. Yussell had the advantage of height and reach and he opened up with a body attack in the eighth that almost finished McDowell.

The Texas cow-milking champion weighed 152 and Goldstein weighed 149½. The cash customers tossed him a net gate of $845.

Wild Bill couldn't find his way under that long left hand of Yussell for the first two rounds. In the opening numbers Yussel spilled Willie to the canvas with a chopping right hand that caught him under the heart when he was off balance.

Yussell pumped home a straight left to Willie's schnozzle at the opening of the second and followed it up with two stinging lefts to McDowell's head, but Wild Willie poured back in, driving Yussel into the ropes.

In a wild exchange at the ropes, both boys did a complete somersault, and Wild Willie landed on his back among the customers in row A. Wild Willie's habit of raising his hand threateningly at the end of each round nearly incited a riot. Yussell appeared not to like it at all.

Buffalo Extended

At the opening of the third, Yussell tore across the ring, and Wild Bill took a headlong spring that resulted in a well-placed blow to Yussell's uncovered chin. Then Wild Willie shot a wide, looping left to Yussell's jaw that slammed him into the ropes. Both boys clinched, heeling and shoving, and as they broke, Wild Bill pounded a hard right to Yussell's jaw. In return he took a smashing left hook to the jaw that snapped his head back.

Referee LeFond had to work harder than he has in weeks in the night's eight-round semifinal as Francisco Montanero, 148, Italian welterweight, came through in surprising style to give Gene Buffalo, 148½, Philadelphia colored fighter, a run for his money.

Buffalo, who resorted to the clowning style ordinarily used by McDowell midway of the fight, had to settle down in the stretch, for Montanero, a last-minute substitute for Joe Boscerino, never stopped boring in. Francisco and Buffalo both lost a round because of foul blows, but the speedier and more accomplished left-hander won the unanimous verdict. Montanero was called in to fight Buffalo five hours before the fight—just in time to get to Washington from New York.

Finnazzo Wins

Eddie Finazzo, Baltimore middleweight, and Buddy Holmes, colored Washingtonian, put on a wild bodysmugging spree in the night's final six-rounder that did everything but bring the house down, and when it was all over it was Finazzo's fight. Eddie out-lasted the colored boy and won a unanimous verdict.

Carol Alexander, the young featherweight from Alexandria who has shown so much promise in winning his two previous professional fights, looked even better in pounding out a four-round decision over Pee Wee Lewis, colored Baltimorean.

Alexander was the master of the situation throughout and left Lewis' left ear a sickening looking mass of cauliflower as the result of a wicked right in the second round.

El Brookman, Washington middleweight, hit Johnny Yellovich, McDowell's stablemate so hard in the fifth round that he did a complete somersault backward, but he came back in the sixth and almost put the more inexperienced Johnny away. Brookman was staggered twice by Johnny's straight left.

In the four-round curtain raiser, Ray Dunn, Washington middleweight, fought to a draw with Jim Elliott, of Hagerstown, Md.

Top Netmen Play In Miami U. Tennis

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP).—Preliminary action, with two seeded players winning easily, cleared the decks today for the top favorites to begin their campaigns in the University of Miami invitational tennis tournament.

Fifth-seeded Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., breezed through Joe Kristufek, of the University of Pittsburgh, 6—2, 6—1.

Billy Gillespie, University of Miami star who was seeded eighth, needed only a half-hour to dispose of Larry Larson, of Coral Gables, 6—2, 6—3.

Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., winner of three consecutive winter tournaments, goes into action tomorrow against Lewis Brownstein of the University of Miami.

Top-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, former national champion who lost to Kovacs at St. Petersburg Sunday, meets Jack Waters, of Miami.

1941 Games Are Sought By Maroons

'Informal' Contests Sought for Team With Louisville and Other Small Schools

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Authoritative campus sources said tonight that the University of Chicago, which abandoned intercollegiate football in December, 1939, has approached several small Midwest schools for 1941 games.

The institution had no football team, as such, last fall, but a squad of 30 to 40 boys dabbled at six-man football under the supervision of Coach Kyle Anderson. Scrimmages were held with several junior college elevens.

Nelson Metcalf, athletic director, declared that any 1941 football plans did not indicate a change in policy by the institution, which still is a member of the Western Conference.

"Our football playing again next fall will be of an informal variety," he explained. "We may arrange a few games with nearby schools."

However, it is known that the University of Louisville was approached for a 1941 game. Two others considered as possible opponents for the Maroons are Wheaton (Ill.) College and Shurtleff College, which was undefeated last season.

Athletic officials plan to charge no admission to the games.

Two District Women Golfers Qualify at 85

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 27.—Diminutive Elizabeth Hicks, of Pasadena, Calif., made both women's par and the course record look ridiculous today as she whipped out a startling 74 that easily won the qualifying medal in the tenth annual Miami Biltmore tournament.

Miss Hicks clipped five strokes off the record and three off par to install herself a strong favorite to succeed Patty Berg as the Biltmore ruler. Miss Berg, since turned professional, had won the tournament five times in a row.

Three Tie Old Mark

Two other golfers—Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., and Grace Amory, of Palm Beach—equaled the women's record of 79 set in 1934 by Maureen Orcutt and tied in 1939 by Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, but it was Elizabeth's day.

Four Have 85

Even at 85 were Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Washington; Nancy McClave, of Maplewood, N. J.; Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, Ohio, and Mrs. Myron Davy, of Washington.

Hitting a tremendous ball for her 5-foot stature, Miss Hicks scored six birdies and an eagle with superb iron shots and accurate chipping. She easily might have equaled or bettered men's par of 71 except for lapses on four holes.

Miss Kirby and Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., runner-up in the last national tournament, qualified with 82s. Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., who defeated Miss Hicks in the recent Punta Gorda finals, scored an 83.

Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Thomas E. Nolan, of Newcastle, La., and Mrs. George Wilcox, jr., of Louisville, Ky., carded 86s.

Woman Referee Steals Show As Ice Mice Win

With a 100-pound woman as referee, the Riverside Ice Mice yesterday won their third straight ice hockey match with a 14-10 victory over the Casino-Coliseum six at Riverside Stadium.

Miss Ann Rider, an employe of Riverside, was recruited to officiate in the game, and she amazed onlookers by handing down accurate decisions with the poise and confidence of a veteran.

Louis Reale, 16-year-old skating sensation from Atlantic City, sparked the winning attack of the Ice Mice by ramming seven goals over the prostrate form of Lyne Leoffler, son of S. G. Leoffler, sr., owner of the Washington Eagles. S. G. Leoffler, jr., also was in the losers' line-up.

The Ice Mice have challenged the Casino-Coliseum to a return game that would be held following Friday night's match between the Washington Eagles and the Baltimore Orioles.

Gene Venzke Enters Penn A. C. Track Meet

Philadelphia, Jan. 27 (AP).—Gene Venzke, who recently set a new record in winning the New York Metropolitan 1,000-yard championship, will compete in the Invitation mile, feature event of the Penn A. C. indoor track meet here February 7.

Lawson Robertson, director of the meet, also announced that John Munski and Luigi Beccali had sent in their entries.

Petey Scalzo Signed For Title Fight Here

Agrees to Meet Chalky Wright in April for Featherweight Crown

Petey Scalzo, National Boxing Association featherweight champion, has submitted his signed contract to the District Boxing Commission agreeing to defend his title here in April against Chalky Wright, colored 126-pounder recently called the No. 1 contender in New York.

Promoter Joe Turner, under whose auspices the fight would be staged, said Eddie Walker, manager of Wright, has asked that he be sent a contract.

Refused Danner Bout

Walker turned down an offer to Wright to fight Abie Danner, Boston featherweight, but told Turner that he would be willing to meet Scalzo if the fight should be for the title.

Turner said he planned to put the fight, a 15-rounder, on here around April 1, at Uline Arena or Griffith Stadium.

Scalzo has agreed to come in on the champion's percentage, 37½ per cent, and should Wright balk at the challenger's customary 12½, Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez probably will launch an elimination contest in an effort to iron out the featherweight muddle—which now offers two "champions."

Buffalo-Abrams Sought

Menendez said the first step in the proposed elimination will come next week when he plans to bring in Joe Marionelli, a new star on the featherweight horizon. Monty Pignatore probably will also figure in the series of eight-round eliminations.

Turner said that attempts to make a match between Georgie Abrams, Washington middleweight, and Gene Buffalo, colored Philadelphian, have gone on the rocks because Chris Dundee refused to permit it, turning down a $750 guarantee offered Abrams.

Jack Kearns Will Promote Benefit Fights

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 27.—Jack Kearns, one-time manager of Jack Dempsey, today announced a plan for a Nation-wide promotion of fights in which the British-American Ambulance Corps would share the profits.

Kearns made the announcement after signing of a contract by William V. C. Ruxton, president of the corps, granting Kearns exclusive rights "to put on prize fights for the benefit of the British-American Ambulance Corps." The contract calls for the corps to get 10 per cent of the gross of any fight Kearn promotes in 1941.

"It is my intention to employ the world's outstanding boxers in these shows," Kearns said. "Every show will be financed and staged under my personal supervision. I will cooperate with local boxing promoters, both big and small, in providing cards and finances for any shows in which the Ambulance Corps will share in the proceeds."

'Blue Law' Threatened

Indianapolis, Jan. 27 (AP).—A bill was introduced in the Indiana State Senate today to repeal a "blue law" which prohibits baseball games after 6 p. m., on Sundays. The law has not applied to softball, hockey or basketball.

Semi-Pros to Work With Army Nines

Chicago, Jan. 27. 27 (AP).—The National Semipro Baseball Congress announced today that Army camp baseball teams will be eligible to compete for the national semipro championship this summer.

The board of directors plan to cooperate with Government officials in organizing leagues. Under the plan Army teams will be permitted to compete in State semipro tournaments without qualifying in district meets.

Semipro officials estimated there would be at least 16,500 Army training teams in action this summer, adding that they had been informed the Government already had placed bids for athletic equipment for this number.

Johnny Rigney Gets Questionnaire

Chicago, Jan. 27 (AP).—Johnny Rigney, 26-year-old Chicago White Sox pitcher, received his draft questionnaire today, indicating that Army training may interrupt his baseball career this season.

The big right-hander recently announced his engagement to Miss Dorothy Comiskey, secretary of the White Sox and part owner of the club.

Local draft board officials said Rigney probably would not be called for actual service for several months, possibly not until fall.

Alvis Denied Right to Hold Bouts Feb. 11

The District Boxing Commission yesterday refused Ray Alvis permission to stage a February 11 fight in the Uline ice arena and took under advisement his requests for exclusive rights to promote shows March 3 and 17.

Alvis, now in process of arranging $2,000 promoter's bond, appeared before the Commission to outline his boxing plans for the future and to complain that he would be taking a financial beating if his February 11 request should be refused.

Informed that the Commission intended to "protect" Promoter Joe Turner's February 18 Harry Jeffra-Joey Archibald fight show in Uline's, Alvis promptly withdrew his request.

Claims He Had Date

He said that Raoul LeMat, manager of the new $400,000 arena, had promised him the February 11 date prior to being approached by Turner.

"I didn't want to upset anybody's baby carriage," Alvis said, "but I went out and spent $500 arranging a show for February 11 and I'd like to have that date. I offered Turner a percentage of the profits if he'd not put in an opposition card, but if I can't have that date, I'll withdraw it and ask for the rights to March 3 and 17."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown and Thomas P. Morgan, jr., members of the Commission, questioned Alvis closely as to his intentions of remaining in the fight promoting business, and Alvis said he planned to stage a "big name" bout at least once a month.

"The Commission doesn't want to show partiality to any one promoter but it does intend to encourage high class fights and high class promoters—not those who're here today gone tomorrow," Morgan told Alvis.

Boasts Plenty of Backing

The commissioners showed hesitation in granting Alvis' requests for the March 3 and 17 dates because they fall on Monday. Sometime ago, the commission granted Turner a virtual monopoly to the Monday night promotions. Turner, however, for the past two weeks has promoted on Tuesday nights, and the Archibald-Jeffra battle will come on a Tuesday night.

"I've got plenty of money behind me," Alvis told the commission. "It's going to take a $6,000 gate in that new arena for anybody to show a profit and I'm not going to put anybody in there I figure won't draw hours."

Indiana Five Extended by Mich., 41-37

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 27.—Michigan's much beaten Wolverines put the pressure on Indiana tonight, but the national collegiate basketball champions had the staying power to win their third consecutive Western Conference game, 41 to 37, before 3,000 spectators.

Indiana led at half time, 22 to 18, after a hectic 20 minutes in which the lead changed hands seven times. Michigan went out in front once early in the second half before the Hoosiers turned on a final burst of speed. It was Michigan's sixth defeat in seven conference games.

Seven of the eight Indiana players scored in the contest, Guard Andy Zimmer connecting for 9 points and Forward Herman Schaefer getting 8. Michigan, using only five players, was paced by Center Jim Mandler with 12 points and Forward Mike Sonak with 11.

At no time did the Hoosiers have a lead of more than eight points. That peak margin was accumulated with six minutes to play and Michigan punctured Indiana's stalling tactics to narrow it at the finish.

Illinois Man Wins Cuban Sail Series

By the Associated Press

Havana, Jan. 27.—Harry G. Nye, of Wilmette, Ill., won the Bacardi Cup in the International Star Class Midwinter Regatta today for the second straight year by sailing his yacht, Gale, to victory in the final race of the three-race series.

Today's win, with his two previous triumphs, gave him a perfect total of 39 points in the cup event of the fifteenth annual regatta.

One of the Cuban entries, Charles de Cardenas' Kurush, was a close second in today's race, with another local boat, Nestor Carrillo's Stardust, third. Fourth place went to Menjuly, owned by Clemente Inclan, of Havana.

A. F. Wakefield's Dickery, of the Southern Lake Michigan fleet, was seventh today, but took second place in the cup competition with 31 points. Kurush and Walter von Nutschler's Pimm-Too, of the Gravesend Bay fleet, tied for third with 29 points each.

Twelve boats competed in today's race. Back of the four leaders in order came Pimm-Too, trailed by Alfred de Marigny's Concubine, from the Bahamas; Dickery; Adrian Iselin 2d's Ace, of the Western Long Island Sound fleet; Roberto Karman's Lia III, of Cuba; Fernando S. Bru's Margarita, of Cuba; Elwood S. White's Shucks, of the Western Long Island Sound fleet, and H. Duff's Delfin II, of Cuba.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 28, 1941

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Mr. Clark Griffith,
General Delivery,
Orlando, Fla.

Dear Mr. G.: I see by the papers that your two young men, Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis, are not very happy about the new plans you and Bucky Harris have mapped out for your Washington infield. Of course, it's none of my business, but I just thought I'd try to be helpful.

POVICH

From what I've been reading, Lewis doesn't like even a little bit the idea of leaving the outfield and going back to third base. And Travis is not at all keen about giving up third base and playing shortstop in your infield, and I don't blame either of 'em, although you'd surprise the h—l out of me by caring what I thought.

Understand, of course, Griff, that I'm trying to understand your side of the case. You don't have any other shortstop of any account except Travis, and when you move Travis off third there isn't much choice except to bring Lewis in from the outfield to play the corner.

But as I understand it, Mr. G., the big reason for the shift is that you think you have recently acquired enough outfielding talent to release Lewis from an outfield job. You announced recently that your 1941 outfield would be Roger Cramer in center, George Case in right and Ben Chapman in left. Thus, you say, it's back to third base for Lewis.

But what I am wondering is, what is so confounded sacred about that new outfield combination of yours that you have to mix up your whole infield and put two guys in positions they don't want to play? Doc Cramer is a swell center fielder and he'll get his share of hits, but since when have Case and Chapman been rated so indispensable to any ball club, particularly yours, which happens to need batting punch?

Out in Cleveland this winter they didn't seem to think so highly of Chapman and that .286 batting average with which he helped to lose the pennant for the Indians. They couldn't have had a heap of regard for him if they were willing to trade him even for Joe Krakauskas, whose pitching didn't fascinate anybody except the hitters. Before you traded Kraky the last hot news about him was that no other club in the league would have him at the $7,500 waiver price.

Now George Case is a nice boy and pretty to look at on the base lines, but a pretty good outfield without Case is not exactly unthinkable, Griff. Mind you, I'm not saying he's a bad ball player. I'm just hinting around that he isn't the sort of a fellow who ordinarily would cause a club to bust up two positions just to keep Case in its outfield.

Buddy Lewis was no great outfielder last year, but it always struck me that he could do less damage out there in rightfield than at third base, where he would have more chances to do damage. I know you can't laugh off his hitting—he and Travis were your only two guys to hit more than .300 last year—but he hit as well as an outfielder last year than he ever did as an infielder.

I can understand why Buddy doesn't want to go back to third base, despite the fact he was no star in your outfield last season. Lewis knows he had a four-year trial at third base and was a worse infielder in his fourth year than he was in his first. He has a full-blown complex about the job. Toward the end of last season he was playing the outfield pretty good, and who can blame him for wanting another crack at it?

And, getting around to Travis, I can well imagine he is a very unhappy man at the news that he is going back to shortstop. It was at third base that Travis found his niche last season, giving Washington better protection at that position than most other clubs in the league had. He probably thought that the awful shortstop job was behind him forever.

That shortstop job was awful, too, as far as Travis was concerned. There never was any complaint about the ground he covered—he could cover plenty—and his throwing arm always was a beaut, but Cecil knows that on every close play at second base he was risking mayhem. Travis never was any nymph around that bag, you know. His reflexes never were any too hot, and he never developed the knack of protecting himself against the base runner. When he was playing shortstop for the Nats he was probably spiked more than any other infielder in the league because he didn't know how to get out of the way and he had too much courage to flinch.

What I was thinking, Griff, is that by the end of the first month of the season, under the present plans for your infield, you'll have a third baseman in Lewis who will be as horrible as ever at the job, and you'll have a shortstop in Travis who will probably be in somebody's hospital with a recurrence of the wounds he always managed to acquire.

See what I mean?

Yrs. in sport,
S. P.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo:

Haight Goes South

Key West, Fla., Jan. 27.

Dear Boss:

I told you yesterday about coming down here to Key West so fast we were crossing our bridges before we came to them. Well, it only takes about two hours in this quaint city to put the brakes on a guy. This morning my friend said he would show me around the place. He drove me up in front of a rather dilapidated house and he says, "This is where some writer lives. I think he's Ernest Hemingway—no that isn't his name. I think it's the home of Mark Twain—or was it John Philip Sousa?" So I says, "You're pitching and I'm catching and now you are asking me questions."

HAIGHT

Tell the truth, I didn't care whose home it was, but I was convinced that this bum didn't know. Well, boss, ever since I was a kid, I've seen those guides around Washington. Those fellows who hang around the foot of the Monument and over by the Capitol wearing yachting caps. I never had much use for them. They always seemed on the make for suckers with out-of-town license plates. But from now on I'm going to tip my hat to every guide I see.

After my friend had shown his ignorance of Key West, I made him drive back to the hotel and a swarm of guides dove down on us. I don't know why I picked Gene, but I did and we promptly dubbed him "Genie With the Light Gold Teeth."

Well, Boss, Gene was a pip. For $1 an hour we got a Key West education that would have taken a lifetime to acquire on our own. He didn't confine himself to touring, either. His conversation took the high road and the low road. He gave us every breath of scandal that's been around Key West for the last 40 years.

You didn't have to ask Gene for any information. Without batting an eye, he took us right behind the portieres in the best homes of Key West and he gave us the inside of the inside on the city's politics. Every ten minutes of the trip Gene referred to Key West's saddest day—September 2, 1935. That was the day of the big hurricane that swept through the Keys at Matacombe, some 70 miles north of Key West, killing scores of World War veterans and wiping out miles of the railroad.

The afternoon train left Key West on schedule that day and was forced to return. That was the last train that ever steamed out of the station. The railroad was abandoned, and with it most of Key West's hopes.

Everywhere Gene took us he pointed to some industry, some decaying building or some business that flourished before "they took the railroad away on September 2, 1935." Four of the largest cigar-making plants in the world, a pineapple factory, the

12 Valuable Show Horses Burned Alive at Rose Hill Farm

Mysterious Blaze Sweeps Talbert Barn

He'll Try, Hustle Home, Sleepy Rox Among Mounts Lost; Dogs Also Perish

Twelve hunters and show horses were burned to death yesterday as a fire of undetermined origin demolished the stable at Eddie Talbert's Rose Hill Farm, near Bethesda, Md.

With a valuable 5-year-old, He'll Try, heading the list, Talbert estimated the loss of his own string of seven horses at $8,500. Owners of the other five mounts in the barn did not state their values.

Of the Talbert string, one was Hustle Home, well-known racer on local tracks. Others included a gray 2-year-old colt and a chestnut yearling, both show prospects; Sleepy Rox, a stallion, who has had some success on the track, and Longful, another racer.

Although the loss of He'll Try, good-looking half-bred son of Repulse, was most important to Talbert's show ring future, a considerable dent was made by the death of Golden Glow, flashy little part-Morgan gelding, who has won innumerable classes both under saddle and over fences.

No one was at Rose Hill when the fire broke out, and the alarm was turned in by passers-by on Bradley Hills Boulevard. By the time Bethesda firemen arrived, the barn was burned to the ground. Talbert, summoned by telephone, ignored a high fever, the result of an influenza attack, to hurry to the scene.

Charred remains of ten of the horses were still visible several hours afterward as a small group of Talbert's acquaintances heard of his misfortune and gathered at the farm. Only survivor was Talbert's stable mascot, a Dalmatian named Bender, who sat shivering in the snow, drearily viewing the ruins with as bewildered an expression as ever crossed a canine muzzle. Another Dalmatian and three puppies were caught by the flames.

Only likely source of the fire was a small stove, which stable hands said had not been lighted for several days.

Trojans Beat Greenbelt Five, 28-26

Stealing the show from play in three other gymnasiums, Eastern High's section of the D. C. Recreation Department Basketball League saw three games decided by four points or less last night. The Trojans trimmed Greenbelt, 28-26, and U. S. S. Potomac nosed out Corner Cafe, 24-22. The widest clash of the night went to Pincus Grill, 30-26, over Christ Church.

Most decisive result of the night's play came at Tech gym, where Book Section smashed Documents, 41-6. Club "40" turned back Blank Section, 24-10, and Hot Shoppes swamped Friendship House, 39-14.

At Central three games saw Boarding House A. C. defeat Garvin's Grill, 26-18; Fort Hunt Shamrocks take the measure of Trinity Lutheran, 26-19, and Vienna A. C. edge Happy Hollow, 35-30. Roosevelt clashes went to the Barons, 24-13, over Vital Statistics; Machine Tabs over Geography, 25-13, and Population by a 27-13 count over Housing.

Congressional Club Members Awaiting Sale Developments

Congressional members heard officers and trustees tell of the stage of proceedings in the sale of the club and an outline of accomplishments of Congressional Club, Inc., in a general meeting last night at the club.

Officers are awaiting expected ratification of the sale Monday, February 3.

General Frank T. Hines, Henry I. Quinn, Howard W. Casey and Myron Davy were speakers.

College Ring Squads Busy On Saturday

College boxing hits a new high in activity on three local fronts this week as Catholic, Columbus and Maryland Universities settle down today to intensive work for Saturday night dates.

Coach Eddie LaFond's Cardinals, with a victory over Lock Haven Teachers, will entertain the New London Coast Guard Academy fighters at Brookland gymnasium. Maryland, with victories to their credit over South Carolina and the Connecticut Coast Guardsmen, fights Virginia at Charlottesville. Coach Jim McNamara's Columbus Explorers open their season at Turner's Arena against The Citadel.

C. U. will be meeting the Coast Guard team for the first time. Maryland, with an almost entirely green team, took a jaunt to New London 10 days ago and took a 4-3 disputed decision.

The Terrapins, kept idle last Saturday by midyear examinations, are rated an even chance with Virginia, which has defeated V. P. I. and lost to North Carolina. The two schools fought 4-4 draws the last two years.

Columbus, whose opening date with South Carolina in Columbia was canceled because of the prevalence of influenza in the Carolina capital, will face The Citadel for the first time. McNamara's men have been working out every day, and despite the fact he has to count almost entirely on new talent, the Explorer coach is optimistic over his chances with the Carolina cadets.

James Sprigman, Beloved Local Sportsman, Is Ill

James H. (Jim) Sprigman, 71, for half a century a leading athlete and sports figure in the District, was reported last night to be seriously ill at his home here, 2129 Florida Avenue Northwest.

Former baseball and track coach at Western and Central High Schools and at Georgetown University, Sprigman has countless friends and admirers. He is one of the founders of the Central "C" Club and also has been active in work of that school's alumni.

Sprigman lives with his wife and a daughter, Mary. He has one other daughter, Josephine, who is married to Lieut. Comdr. Stuart Ingersoll, U. S. N.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—Hank Luisetti, perhaps the only instantly recognizable "name" player in modern basketball history, is rapidly adding to his reputation as the game's greatest player, now that he is safely back in the fold of the A. A. U.

CONSIDINE

The tall former Stanford star is setting coast attendance records wherever he appears with the Olympic Club team. He was out of basketball for nearly two years, until he regained his amateur standing a few weeks ago and joined the famed Olympic Club's court outfit. But, if anything, he is better than ever today. His instinctive generalship on the court seems to have taken on added sharpness. His floor play has improved and his shooting eye is of the same deadly caliber that permitted him to become a shining individual in a sport whose players are usually anonymous.

He refused to play professional basketball during his two-year layoff. But he lost his amateur standing by appearing in a winsome class movie called "Campus Confessions." The critics said that his performance in that epic quickie proved beyond all doubt that Hank was amateur. But he was paid $10,000 for his work as the basketball hero, which he commendably used to put his parents into a little business and to pay for the rest of his schooling. He does heavy manual work for a local oil company at nearby Richmond, learning the business from the ground up. It is tough work, but it kept him in shape during his layoff.

Thousands were turned away the night Hank led his Olympic team to Victory over Stanford, the best college team on the coast. He turned them away for the Olympics-St. Mary's game, too. He was hurt in that game and notified the promoters of an Olympics vs. Athens Club game, at Oakland, that he wouldn't be able to play in that January 6 game. The promoters couldn't bear to face this bad news. They continued to advertise him. The result was that the Oakland Municipal Auditorium was bulging with an overcapacity crowd when an apprehensive announcer took the floor just before the start of the game and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, we regret to announce that Hank Luisetti is bedridden at home and will be unable to play tonight."

The boo that erupted from the deceived customers made the roof quiver. A good half of the audience stormed down across the floor and attacked the box office, demanding their dough back.

Which is the kind of guy Luisetti is, out here.

He is a quiet, modest, corn-stalky Italian with plenty of what it takes, out there on the court, and a positive genius for the sport. He coaches the team, as well as stars for it. He has installed a 5-formation on throw-in plays beneath the opponents' basket, and it is apparently as efficacious and as bewildering as the T-formation of the football Bears and Stanfords. He has a good team to work with—notably Toddy Giannini, late of Santa Clara; Arvid Hedman, of the University of San Francisco and Swede Anderson, former St. Mary's star.

He scored 26 points against his old school and 24 against St. Mary's. But he's no showboatman. When he was still limping from a banged ankle, he put on a semistationary passing performance which saw him set up the scoring of 28 points. Local gamblers will lay 10 to 1 that he won't miss, when he's down there in scoring position and takes a crack at the hoop.

The A. A. U. went through a lot of that phony hocus pocus of theirs before agreeing to give him a clean bill of health. There were board meetings, much correspondence and wiring back and forth across the country and finally the momentous announcement that Hank had done sufficient penance and could enter the kingdom of Brundage, Kirby, Ferris and those other titans of starched shirts.

By happy coincidence, this epochal decision enables Hank to appear in the National A. A. U. basketball tournament, to be held at the end of this season in, we believe, Denver. And since there is every reason to believe that the Olympic Club will survive until the latest stages of the tournament, it is natural to suppose that the tournament will attract a record gate, to be used for the purchase of medals and trophies from A. A. U. merchants, the defraying of traveling expenses of some of the A. A. U. officials and the furtherance of A. A. U. work in general.

For all his popularity, Luisetti is only modestly exploited here. There is no local or nearby promoter of the type of Ned Irish, who brought big time basketball to Madison Square Garden and to other Eastern centers. His biggest audience as an Olympic club star is 8,000—which was all the Pacific Auditorium would hold. We suspect that our friend Irish would build a roof on Kezar Stadium, which could seat 75,000 for basketball, and present Hank there. For there hasn't been anything as good or as publicized as Luisetti since the early days of the old Celtics, if then, and it is a pity that so few will bear witness to his dazzling prime.

Penn State Tests Hoyas Tomorrow

With both teams in the running for eastern collegiate basketball honors and a bid to the national tourney in Madison Square Garden, tomorrow night's game between Georgetown and Penn State will probably definitely eliminate one of the two contenders.

The Hoyas will be after victory No. 11 in a row while the Nittany Lions have won six out of eight, including victories over N. Y. U. and Syracuse. One of the college basketball rating systems puts the Hoyas second in the East and seventh in the Nation. A victory over Penn State will not better this standing but it will enable Coach Ripley's men to hold their own.

Sunday's benefit game with the Brewers enabled the Hoyas to get in a much-needed scrimmage, and yesterday in the Hilltop gym they showed a result of the Sunday practice with one of the best practice sessions of the season.

Penn State will move to American U. Thursday night for a game with Coach Staff Cassell's Eagles.

Dick Stahl Added To Arena Mat Card Thursday

In keeping with his "new faces" policy, Promoter Joe Turner announced yesterday he had booked Dick Stahl, former Wisconsin University all-around athlete, for a special 30-minute bout on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. Stahl has been matched against Joe DeValteau, popular French refugee, who recently held Paul Boesch to a 30-minute draw.

Feature honors will be turned over to The Green Hornet, the Green Hornet, the mysterious masked man in emerald, and "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, the Baltimore villain. It will be The Hornet's first headline role.

The semi-windup will be between Boesch and Ivan Managoff who saw his streak temporarily halted when he was held to a draw by Warren Bockwinkle last Thursday. Bockwinkle also will return for action, meeting Chris Zaharias, the kangaroo-kicking little Greek Demon.

Promoter Turner announced that he has been besieged with requests to have Fred Grobmier, the famous scissors expert, on the card, and he hoped to be able to book the lanky Midwesterner. Grobmier beat Tiger Tasker last week.

American U. Game With Penn State To Start at 7:30

Time of the Penn State-American University game Thursday night has been moved up to 7:30 p. m. to allow the fans plenty of time to get from the court battle to the President's Birthday Balls at the various hotels.

Proceeds of the game will go to the Infantile Paralysis Fund, according to A. U. officials. A dance will follow the game.

The Nittany Lions, exponents of the sliding zone defense may have trouble solving the American U. defense as Coach Staff Cassell has been working his boys on perfection of the zone during examination and he may give the favored Penn Staters unexpected trouble in the small A. U. gym.

The Eagles have been idle since early in January and enter the game with two victories in six starts.

Gophers Beat Buckeyes in Extra Period

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Jan. 27.—Minnesota tonight handed Ohio State's basketball team another severe jolt in its bid for top-ranking Western Conference honors when it scored a thrilling 46-to-43 overtime victory over the Buckeyes before 6,300 persons.

The result left both teams with three victories and two defeats in the conference.

Minnesota led most of the game and enjoyed a 24-to-16 margin at half-time. The Ohioans came back in the second half and were behind, 36 to 30, when Dick Fisher, sharpshooting forward, dropped in three field goals to tie the score. The two teams then exchanged field goals and then free throws to keep the score tied. Roger Jorgeson, big center, tipped in a short one for Ohio State and Willie Warhol, Gopher guard, retaliated to make the score 41 to 41. The remaining three minutes of regular playing time found both teams missing opportunities.

Gophers Score

Minnesota got the tipoff at the start of the overtime and Warhol counted a field goal. The Gophers hung onto the ball and finally Don Carlson, forward, dribbled for a close-in field goal and Minnesota led by four points. McLain dropped in a long shot for Ohio State and the Gophers again went into a stalling game. Don Smith, forward, was fouled by an anxious Buckeye with little more than a minute remaining and he dropped in the gift toss to end the scoring.

Fisher scored 11 field goals and 2 free throws for 24 points.

Table Tennis Play Attracts Dance Team

It's no mere publicity gag to write that Wally and Verdlyn Stapleton, the dance team billed to appear at the Earle Theater next week, are planning to enter the Eastern table tennis championships at Heurich gym Saturday and Sunday.

Now practicing the routines they will go through here, the Stapletons declare that they have played ping pong, or table tennis as the authorities insist upon calling it, in every State of the Union and see no reason to pass up the District of Columbia. Especially, when such an opportunity of competing with the best paddlers of the East presents itself.

Singles Start at 1 O'Clock

Tournament officials state that they will make every effort to schedule the Stapletons' matches between the four shows they must appear in Saturday. Men's singles are scheduled from 1 o'clock on Saturday and women's competition will start three hours later.

All contests will be under the control of George H. Foster, a major in the Reserve Corps now on active duty at the War Department, who has been active in District table tennis circles ever since the D. C. T. T. A. was formed in 1930. Foster is chairman of the national rules committee.

Former World Champ, Now a Hitler Aerial Soldier, Talks Fight

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Jan. 27.—"Soldat" M. Schmeling still has a pretty high regard for the boxing ability of Max Schmeling, former world heavyweight champion.

Though he was stopped by Champion Joe Louis in one round the last time they met, he would concede the Brown Bomber nothing more today than that "he's still the best man they've got over there." He wasn't, obviously, cutting himself out of the world picture.

Max Is Guest at Fight

Schmeling, though now a "fallschirmjaeger" (parachute trooper), hasn't quit the ring. While he pointed out there was no chance of his making another trip to the United States at present, even though he'd like to, there still is a possibility he may defend his European heavyweight title.

It was with this in mind that Schmeling, a guest of the Berlin stadium together with some 20 other parachute troopers, sat in on yesterday's battle between Walter Neusel and Adolf Heuser. Max, who beat Neusel in nine rounds in 1934 and stopped Heuser in 72 seconds in 1939, studied the two closely as Neusel slugged his way to victory, explaining he might meet one or the other on some future date.

"It's not decided definitely yet," said Der Max, "whether the army will give me furlough to train." Under German boxing rules, Schmeling must defend the title within a specified time or give it up.

Says His Leg Is O. K.

He would say little about his activities as a parachute trooper beyond the statement that "it takes just as much training as it does to be a boxer." To all further questions he simply smiled and said, "You'd better not ask me about that," then chuckled at the interviewer's disappointment.

The Black Uhlan belittled the leg injury he received while training for parachute jumping. He said the leg had healed completely, in spite of talk in Berlin that the break had been serious, and showed no signs of a limp. He moved around as spryly as he ever did in the ring.

Landon School Beats Blair Five, 31 to 17

One of the stiffest obstacles in its path to a successful season was nonchalantly hurdled by Landon School's quintet yesterday when it swamped Montgomery Blair, of Silver Spring, 31-17.

The first half proved the decisive one in the clash at Landon's gym, the hosts romping into a 17-7 lead that Blair was never able to overcome. The margin was only slightly improved in the last half, though numerous reserves went into action for the winners.

Paul Baker, one of the leading schoolboy scorers in the District, provided the high point performance for the winners with 10. Crandall Alford's 6 markers ranked second as the home club rang up its fifth triumph in seven starts.

Blair, while suffering its eighth defeat in 11 games, was led by Nick Carter, who could manage for only four points.

Rick Ferrell Sees Washington Club in First-Division Fight

Veteran Catcher Says It All Depends on The Pitching Staff

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 27.—Rick Ferrell, veteran Washington catcher, said today the Nationals may finish the coming season in better than fourth place if the pitching comes up to his expectations.

Ferrell predicted a close fight between Cleveland and New York for the pennant with Boston and Detroit threatening. Washington, he declared, will be battling for fourth place, but may go even higher if the team's pitching comes through.

"We have three pitchers, Ken Chase, Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson, who are potential 20-game winners," he said. "I'm not predicting they will win 20 apiece, but I say they might and if they should, well, look out for us."

Ferrell praised Hudson, the youngster who won 17 games as a freshman last season.

"He's got poise and control," explained Rick, "a good change of pace and a tricky curve. Furthermore, he learns fast. You tell him a batter's weakness once and he remembers it. He ought to have a big year this season."

As for Leonard, Ferrell declared the veteran knuckle-ball pitcher was as good as ever and that his 1940 record was spoiled by tough luck.

"That knuckler of his comes at a batter like a butterfly," he said. "They don't know which way it's going to break, and neither does Dutch. And just when they get set to tee off on it, Leonard shoots in a fast one. He's tricky, that fellow."

RICK FERRELL

Loss of Gerald Walker via the trade route to Cleveland isn't going to harm the Nats much in Ferrell's opinion because they acquired Roger Cramer and Ben Chapman, both dangerous batsmen, in return.

22 Schoolboy Games This Week

In deference to midyear exams, public high school cagers temporarily halt wrangling among themselves this week, but there will be no lack of basketball action for scholastic fans.

Starting with eight games today, schoolboy fives will participate in something like 22 games this week, headlined by three of the most torrid rivalries in this section.

First of the big clashes will be Thursday night at Ritchie Coliseum, College Park, where the forces of Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Montgomery Blair open hostilities for the mythical Montgomery County title. On Friday the scene shifts to the other side of town, Ballston, where Washington-Lee and George Washington High play the first of two games. Finally, on Saturday, the hot scrap which annually draws one of the biggest houses of the season—St. John's vs. Gonzaga—will be staged at Tech gym.

Though they won't bother one another, interhigh quints have numerous interesting battles on the schedule during the next five days. Western, fresh from a stunning upset of Roosevelt, starts things off today in a meeting with Gonzaga's powerful club at the latter's court. Other games bring together Bethesda-C. C. and Coolidge; St. John's and Eastern; Wilson and Georgetown Prep; Anacostia and Frederick (Md.) High; Mount Rainier and Laurel; Mount Vernon and Fairfax, and Rockville and Damascus. All will be on the court of the last mentioned.

Gino Rex Scores 2-Length Victory in Pompano at Hialeah

Victor Pays $4; Trimly Takes Place

10,545 See Favorite Romp Home in Day's Feature; Play House Takes Show Spoils

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 27.—Gino Rex, Paul Codd's Widener Cup candidate, scored an easy front-running triumph in the Pompano Purse, mile-and-a-furlong piece de resistance on the program offered under sunny skies here today. The even-money favorite breezed home with two lengths to spare in 1:50 3-5. He was the first successful choice in the six races decided. Four of the five favorites wound up second.

Trimly, longest-priced horse in the field of six veterans, carried the Parkwood Stable's silks to the place, a length in advance of J. H. Miles' Play House, an entry with Sun Mica. A crowd of 10,545 saw Gino Rex give Wendell Eads, leading apprentice here, his fourteenth score of the meeting.

It was an ideal spot for the winner, which had all the speed of the small field. With nothing to run against him, Gino Rex easily opened up a safe advantage. Eads let him coast along in front of Sun Mica until that fellow faltered. Play House then took up the chase to no avail. Trimly finally made the last challenge, but the gray pacemaker easily held his bid under control.

Fairgrounds Sale To Syndicate Now Appears Certain

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Jan. 27.—Sylvester W. Labrot, spokesman of a syndicate negotiating to purchase the idle Fair Grounds race track to resume racing here, announced today that "barring unforeseen technicalities the deal is definitely going through."

Labrot said it would be decided Wednesday night at a meeting of prospective subscribers, whether an option to purchase the track for $525,000 would be taken up. The option expires next Monday.

Tentative plans call for a race meet of about 45 days starting after next Christmas and lasting until Mardi Gras. The track was sold last fall by the Louisiana Jockey Club, which claimed the State's new racing law made operation of a track unprofitable.

New Orleans was without racing this season for the first time in 25 years.

PEANUT LADY was a keen forward factor from the start, took command over CHANCE MAKER and held on with good courage. MILITARY GIRL was well placed from the start, came to the inside for the final drive and hung right at the close. ORCHIDS NEXT was slow to begin, improved his position gradually and weakened suddenly in the final sixteenth.

The latter had a rough trip.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROSE ANITA, $12.90, $5.30, $3.80; OUR FLORENCE, $3.50, $2.70; MONKS MEMO, $3.60.

ROSE ANITA, steadied off the early pace, moved up gradually on the inside coming into the stretch, but was blocked. She swung around the leaders the last sixteenth and, gaining fast, got up in the last stride. OUR FLORENCE bettered her position steadily on the outside, bore in when placed to punishment through the stretch and Eads could not do her justice. MONKS MEMO was shuffled back through the stretch by OUR FLORENCE, yet held the others safe. PURO ORO secured clear passage and had no excuses.

Daily Double, BALLADINE and ROSE ANITA, Paid $311.70

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03½. Winner, C. H. Hughes' ch. g. FLOOD II drew out into a long lead entering the stretch, but then weakened suddenly in the final furlong and was under extreme urging at the end. ONE TIP bettered his position steadily under strong handling and was wearing the winner down. ARESTINO, slow to begin, made up much ground in the final quarter mile. OLD SMOOTHY had no mishaps.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:33½. Winner, W. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JELWELL, $28.20, $12.60, $6.70; ESPINO GOLD, $28.80, $14.70; THROTTLE WIDE, $7.20.

JELWELL, saving ground and going well up all the way, disposed of REMARKABLE through the stretch, but was ridden out strongly to maintain her advantage. ESPINO GOLD gradually worked his way up and outgamed THROTTLE WIDE in the final drive. The latter huns in the last furlong. REMARKABLE set a fast pace, but then stopped badly after going 6 furlongs. MICHIGAN FLYER ran a bad race.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:04½. Winner, Coldstream Stable's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CURIOUS COIN, $13.20, $7.80, $4.40; ROYAL ROBES, $4.40, $2.80; STARRY HOPE, $8.70.

CURIOUS COIN made up ground gradually on the outside, raced HY-COP into defeat through the stretch and held his opposition same at the end under mild handling. ROYAL ROBES, pocketed rounding the turn, closed gamely when clear and outlasted STARRY HOPE in the final drive. The latter saved much ground after leaving the backstretch and was going strongly at the finish. HY-COP displayed good speed, but weakened in the last furlong.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GINO REX, $4.00, $2.90, $2.30; TRIMLY, $9.00, $3.20; PLAY HOUSE (entry), $2.90.

GINO REX held the field safe for speed and, cleverly rated in front, had something in reserve through the stretch, winning under light urging. TRIMLY, well placed early, closed gamely under punishment, but could not reach the winner. PLAY HOUSE moved up stoutly entering the stretch, but then faltered in the final drive. HIGH FIDELITY closed a big gap the last 3 furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:03. HISTRIONIC, eased off the pace until approaching the half-mile pole, opened up a winning lead rounding the turn, but faltered through the stretch and just lasted. BIG ROVER improved his position along the inside, made a bold effort, but could not get up. PRINCE DEREK worked his way up gradually and held WANNA HYGRO safe. The latter stopped badly nearing the end.

Atlantic City Sextet Invades Tonight

Eagles Host To Jinx Team At Riverside

Sea Gulls Have Not Lost to Local Team In Last 4 Matches; Locals Crippled

By Jack Munhall

Undefeated in ten straight matches and hotter than your favorite swing band, the Washington Eagles tonight risk their winning streak against their chief nemesis, the aggressive Atlantic City Sea Gulls, at 8:30 at Riverside Stadium.

The Sea Gulls, last team to defeat the Eagles and the team that interrupted their string of victories at eight with a 2-2 deadlock at Atlantic City Saturday night, have definitely established themselves as Washington's biggest obstacle to an Eastern amateur hockey title.

However, the Sea Gulls come here a bit fagged out from a strenuous weekend schedule which found them playing at home Saturday, and in Boston Sunday afternoon, and will enter the match decided underdogs.

Out To Snap Jinx

Washington, at the peak of form in its 2-1 triumph over the rejuvenated New York Rovers Sunday at Madison Square Garden, will be seeking its first victory in five starts against the rough and ready resort club.

In their last four matches with the Sea Gulls, the Eagles twice were upset and twice were tied. After Washington had swamped them 4-2 and 6-1, the Sea Gulls won a 6-5 game, tied the Eagles in overtime, 3-3, routed them, 7-3, and capped their humiliation of the league leaders with Saturday's night 2-2 regulation-time deadlock.

The top three scorers of the Eastern League will be seen in tonight's match, headed by the Eagles' Norm Burns who is out to crack a pair of league scoring marks. Burns' two leading rivals for the scoring lead are Sammy Fasano and Heck Pozzo, Sea Gull Wingmen.

Colvin Out

The Eagles will not be at full strength for this match, what with Burns carrying four stitches in his right cheek bone as a result of an injury sustained Sunday; Len Burrage, star defenseman, hobbling on a bad leg, and both goalies, Gordon Hemming and Lester Colvin, suffering from influenza. Colvin definitely is out, confined to his bed, and Hemming will have to play despite a bad cold which left him exhausted after Sunday's match in which the Rovers beat a steady path to the nets. Were it not for the absence of Colvin, Coach Redvers Mackenzie certainly would give Hemming a several days' rest.

Always rough, the Sea Gulls are expected to be especially so tonight, for they were as angry as a tormented swarm of bees when Washington shoved over two third-period goals to deprive them of a victory Saturday. With Pozzo, Fasano, Prokop and Alf Webster leading their attack, the Gulls at present are one of the hardest-driving clubs in the league and always are tough for Washington to beat.

Eagles Ready

But currently no team in the league figures to beat the Eagles who are playing with the skill and luck of champions. Hal Dewey, leading Washington scorer of 1940, has regained his touch and with Paul Courteau, Jack MacBeth and Frank Mailley and others setting up shots, Dewey and Burns form a fearsome point-getting combination.

The defense work of Jim McCurry, the newcomer, and the ever-dependable Burrage was never better than Saturday and Sunday, and Ross Knipfel also seems to have snapped out of a brief slump. These three have been working extra hard in recent matches due to the unexplainable benching of Johnny McTeer, big, 220-pound Irishman and a popular figure with the fans. McTeer played only three minutes again the Sea Gulls Saturday and not at all against the Rovers Sunday.

D. C. Net Stars Will Officiate At Pro Match

Many of Washington's top-flight amateur tennis players will be in the roles of officials Friday night when Alice Marble and her professional troupe appear at Ritchie Coliseum in a series of exhibitions.

Buddy Adair, young local star who was given the task of rounding up the officials, yesterday announced his choices. Bill Underwood, Stanford graduate, will referee the headline match between Queen Marble and Mary Hardwick, No. 1 British player.

Frank Shore will handle the mixed doubles in which Miss Marble and Bill Tilden oppose Miss Hardwick and Don Budge, and either Barney Welsh, for many years District champion, or veteran Tom Mangan will referee the singles between Tilden and Budge.

Among Those Named

Among those named as linesmen are Davey Johnsen, the Middle Atlantic champion; Hugh Lynch, usually Welsh's chief rival for District honors; Alphonso Smith, former University of Virginia ace; Lieut. Jimmy Farrin, of the Navy Leach Cup team; Ray Stocklinski, one of the leading public parks stars; Ricky Willis, of Columbia Country Club; Dick Murphy, former Harvard No. 1 player, and Wilbur Taylor and Ramsey Donovan, of Argyle Country Club.

Six ball boys will be selected from among students of American University, and Tech and Roosevelt High Schools.

Stars to Visit White House

With Miss Marble holding a 12-1 lead over Miss Hardwick, the pro troupers invade Pittsburgh tonight on their twelfth stop. Tilden, out for more than a week recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident, is scheduled to return to action at Pittsburgh. Tomorrow night the pros play in Philadelphia, and they are scheduled to arrive here Thursday in time for Misses Hardwick and Marble to keep a White House luncheon date with Mrs. Roosevelt.

Friday at 4 p. m. Miss Marble and her discoverer-teacher, Eleanor Tennant, will hold a free clinic at Tech High gym.

Bosox Get Contract From Earl Johnson

Boston, Jan. 27 (AP).—The signed contract of Earl Johnson, of Seattle, youthful left-hander who won six and lost two games after being called up from the Piedmont League last summer, was received today by the Boston Red Sox management.

Johnson, a St. Mary's College product, made his pro baseball debut last season and won 12 games and dropped six with Rocky Mount of the Piedmont League before being brought up to aid the failing Sox pitching staff in August.

60 Attend Opening Of Golfing School

2-Day Short-Course Instruction at Maryland Draws Out Local Greenskeepers; Experts On All Phases of Upkeep Are Speakers

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Golf's forgotten men, the greenskeepers, went to school in record numbers yesterday in the first day's session of the third annual University of Maryland short course, sponsored by the Mid-Atlantic Association of Greenskeepers.

For the third consecutive year the course was jinxed by the worst storm of the season but despite near-impassable roads in all directions Prof. Ernest N. Cory, director of the course, reported more than 60 in attendance.

The boys spent a busy day, starting at 9 o'clock with registration and continuing far into the night with a dinner at the Lord Calvert Inn. They were in session throughout the day at the horticultural building at the university.

The short courses, held all over the country at various colleges, provide the greenskeepers, professionals and representatives of cemeteries, nurseries, etc., with mid-winter instruction for their varied year-round duties.

The speakers are all experts in their particular line, most of them interested in the maintenance of fine turf. Yesterday's speakers included W. S. Flynn, Wynnewood, Pa., on "Golf Course Construction"; O. J. Noer, Milwaukee, on "Soils"; R. P. Thomas, of the host school, on "Fertilizers"; T. T. Taylor, Rye, N. Y., on "Course and Grounds Management"; Alton E. Rabbitt, National Park Service, on "Renovating Turf," and J. W. Bengston, U. S. G. A. greens section, on "Control of Weeds and Turf Diseases."

The second and final day's speakers today will be Dr. John Monteith, of the U. S. G. A.; Fred Grau, State College, Pa.; J. O. Pepper, also of State College; P. Donofrio, Westminster, and Guy Strickler, Towson, Md. The session will be concluded with question box replies.

John Dishington, Locust Valley, Long Island, traveled the longest distance for the course, while Pennsylvania and Virginia supplied many of the greenskeepers. E. R. Steininger, represented the famous Pine Valley Club in Clemington, N. J.

Several golf professionals were on hand, including Andy Gibson, of the Bonnie View Club in Baltimore, and Arthur Edgar, Chambersburg, Pa. Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven, was registered as both pro and greenskeeper, while his brother, Joe Ryan, of Philadelphia, was also in attendance.

Briggs Simpich, prominent local attorney and member of Columbia Country Club, was master of ceremonies at the dinner last night. Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, spoke briefly, while officers of the Greenskeepers Association, C. A. Hook, president; C. T. McMaster, vice president, and R. P. Hines, secretary-treasurer, were introduced.

Greenskeepers of local clubs attending included Roy Athey, Kenwood; Walter Cosby, Army and Navy; O. B. Fitts, Columbia; Russell King, Beaver Dam; Bill Leverton, White Flint; Talmadge Lumsden, Bannockburn; Harold Pammel, Soldiers' Home; Tom Ryan, Belle Haven; Philip Pratt, Georgetown Prep; Tom Fisher, Burning Tree; Rudy Will, Woodmont, and R. P. Hines, representing the public courses.

J.C.C. Event Will Decide 'Mr. District'

The Capital has its "Miss Washington," and after tonight, so help us, it'll have a "Mr. District of Columbia."

Some time along about 7 o'clock tonight at the Jewish Community Center, a score of brawny citizens will parade across the gymnasium floor in what will be the first male beauty contest ever staged in the District.

The contest will be the main event in the second annual senior weightlifting championships staged under auspices of the District Amateur Athletic Union.

Lifting will be done in six different weight classes, and the three Olympic lifts will be used as a means of determining the champion in each division. They are the two-arm military press, the two-hand snatch and the two-arm clean and jerk.

Favorites to repeat in the lifting end of the contest will be Joe Accardi, last year's heavyweight champion and acknowledged as the District's strongest man; Kallio, 1940 runner-up for the light-heavyweight title. The light-heavy event will be a four-way battle involving Richard Smith, 1940 champion, Keith Kallio, Roger Johnston and Bob Scoffield.

In the "beauty contest" will parade such men as Curtis Millar, Johnston, Bob Stange, Kallio, Smith, Thomas and Accardi. The "Mr. District" contest to select the "perfect man" is open to anyone who cares to enter, John Dulin, chairman of the lifting committee, said.

Buddy Walker Wins Not Over Delaney

Baltimore, Jan. 27 (AP).—Buddy Walker, Columbus, Ohio heavyweight, scored a unanimous 10-round decision tonight over Al Delaney, of Toronto, Canada.

The hard-hitting Ohioan sent Delaney to the canvas for a count of nine in the third round and appeared to be on his way to a knockout.

But Delaney weathered the round and rallied for a strong finish. He took the offensive in the late stanzas and won the sixth and ninth rounds and traded blow for blow in the tenth.

It was the fourth consecutive victory for Walker. He weighed 191¼ and Delaney 191.

Pricci's 469 Pin Set Leads Loan League

Joe Pricci, one of Washington's best bowlers, rolling on the Ice Palace drives last night in the Building & Loan League, posted a 172 high game which he followed with a 469 set. It looked like old times to Joe for a while and brought back memories of eight years ago when he set a record string count of 497 when a member of the Rex Club. Pricci's counts were 161-136-172. It was natural for his Washington Permanent boys to capture team highs with 590-1673 although actually losing the odd game to Oriental who had only 1628 sticks for the three games.

SANITARY

Eddie Hutchinson was the star of the Sanitary League's play at Convention Hall, rolling 169 for top game which he followed with his first 400 set, getting a whopping 442 to set highs for the league. Hutchinson rolled opposite Bill Gartrell—who once rolled a 210 game—and the latter had a 403 set. The Sanico Bakery boys took the team highs with 620 and 1734.

MERCHANTS

The Merchants League at Convention Hall was led by Carl Simpson, Valley Forge, who had highs for individuals of 161-393. Thos. Summerville won team top counts with 629-1747.

GEORGIA AVENUE

Al Cissel, Sanford's, had 158-391 to spark the Georgia Avenue meet at Silver Spring and aid his team to top counts of 613 and 1,732. The National Electric Machine boys still lead, followed by Sanford's and Schrider Plumbing.

NAVY LEAGUE

Joe Kuttner, Hydrographic, was the big game roller in the Navy League's play at Arcadia, his 153 leading. Gerald Small, Aeronautics, took the set with a 385 count. Yards and Docks was team game winner after a pinfall of 586, while 1,695 stiocks won Coast Guard the set honors. Adjutants and Inspectors won all three from the Pay Masters to chalk up nine straight victories, and Model Basin took three from Ordnance to remain in second place.

FARM CREDIT

In the Farm Credit rolling at Penn the play was sparked by Piper, Purchase, and Norris, Duplicating, who had 151 for game and 398 for set. Duplicating rolled a 619 game with Purchase taking the set after a 1734 pinfall.

RACQUETERS

Frances Bassett, of the Racqueters team in the Ice Palace Ladies League, was the big scorer with a 127 game and 339 set. The Meteors took a 515 pinfall to win high game with the Woodpeckers winning the set after counting for 1449, knocking over the leading Eagles in all three to give the Doves a tie for first.

KILOWATT

Odie Brown, once a star in the Men's District League, was back in form last night in the Kilowatt play at Penn Recreation with a top game and set of 166-424 with the set mark tying the season record chalked up by Bill Krauss some weeks ago. The Transit lads had the best team on the drives, rolling 592 and 1689 to lead, taking the odd game from Station Engineers as well.

Minor Loop Head Against Entry Of Mexican Nine

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., Jan. 27.—W. G. Bramham, head of baseball's minor leagues, today advised the Arizona-Texas League against its plans to expand the circuit into Mexico.

Bramham pointed out the difficulty over exchange and the contentions that are raised as to whether players should be paid in American or other currency.

Bramham advised League President R. E. Souers:

"Under these conditions, I do not believe we should grant memberships across another border at this time."

The league had considered taking in Chihuahua, Mexico, for the 1941 season.

Hoppe Opens Fight for Cue Title

Recovered From Illness, Champ Faces Hard Grind

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Willie Hoppe, having conquered pneumonia, returns to the billiard wars tomorrow night in defense of the world's three-cushion championship facing a tremendous handicap.

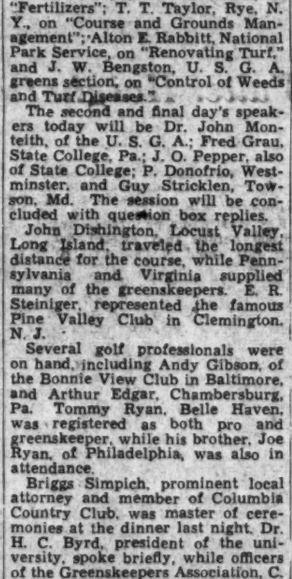
This amazing 53-year-old champion must play 17 games in 17 days to catch up with 17 rivals who have been in the title competition two weeks while he was combating illness. His admirers say he has the stamina and iron nerve to overhaul the field.

Hoppe was stricken as he was rounding out a successful defense of his title against Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, in a 480-point challenge match.

Peterson First Foe

Hoppe, displaying the same form he showed last year in winning the title, rolled up a prohibitive lead on Schaefer, but collapsed at the table before the match was ended. His rival, however, conceded he had retained the crown.

His initial opponent tomorrow night will be young Herbert Peterson, of St. Louis, a rookie in big-time competition who hasn't won a game in 11 previous tournament contests.



WILLIE HOPPE

Hoppe doubtless will play the inexperienced and less talented entrants while regaining his incomparable "touch."

Won 20 Straight

Naturally, his opponents fear the worst. Last year he mowed down this same field. He won 20 straight games, finishing undefeated and with a new record for average points an inning. This was an even more remarkable feat, coming, as it did, 33 years after he won his first world's title in 1906.

Based on their play in the current tournament, Hoppe's most dangerous rivals figure to be Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia; Art Thurnblad, Kenosha, Wis.; Welker Cochran, San Francisco (all former champions); Jay Bozeman, Vallejo, Calif.; Allen Hall, Chicago, and Schaefer, runner-up last year and also a former champion.

Competent observers rate Hoppe an overwhelming favorite to retain the championship unless his illness has robbed him of the necessary precision and stamina to withstand a 17-game grind between now and February 12, closing day of the championship play.

Willie Must Play 17 3-Cushion Games In as Many Nights

Contract Bridge

A contributor, H. B. T., fell into truble on the hand which follows. He writes to find out what his proper bid should have been.

♠ Q 8 6 4
♡ 10 2
◇ K Q 9 6 3
♣ J 6

"Neither side was vulnerable and the bidding had gone:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ♡	3 ♡	?

"At this point I passed. My partner criticized me severely and said I should have bid spades or diamonds. What bid would you recommend?"

H. B. T.'s partner has shown a tremendous hand by the game-forcing call of two hearts, and he should reply. The over-call in an adversary's suit may be likened to a giant takeout double, indicating marked preference for the major suits. Three spades is East's proper bid as the four-card major should be shown before the five-card minor suit. The diamonds may be mentioned later.

Good-Neighbor Policy Is Vital, Bankers Told

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Uniting the Americas through the good neighbor policy is a vital part of National defense, Washington bankers were told last night at their annual midwinter meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Joseph C. Rovensky, addressing the 250 local financiers and their guests, said: "We have already had a tremendous lift in our exports to Latin America. In the first 11 months of 1940 we shipped $711,000,000 of merchandise compared with $556,000,000 in the same period of 1939."

Adding that the United States once before practically had this market monopolized, Mr. Rovensky urged that this country "not fumble the ball this time." Mr. Rovensky is director of finance and industry of the Council of National Defense. He is on a leave of absence from the Chase National Bank of New York City where he held the position of vice president.

S. William Miller, treasurer, Union Trust Company and chairman of the committee on Commercial Trade Activities, delivered a report of that committee containing some information about the city's business activities.

Taliaferro Put in Line

President A. M. McLachlen of the bankers' association announced the selection of Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer of the Riggs National Bank, as general convention chairman for the 1941 convention to be held at The Homestead, Hot Springs, Va., June 5-8. His selection as general convention chairman places him in line as an officer of the association and ultimately for the presidency.

Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier of the Hamilton National Bank and member of the National Defense Loans Committee of the American Bankers Association representing the Fifth Federal Reserve District, addressed the members concerning the activities of this committee.

Export Loss Cited:

Mr. Rovensky also said:

"The impact of the war upon the economies of the Central and South American Republics, the resultant difficulties for their people, create a situation that we, even for our own well being, could not ignore.

"The most notable effect of the war was its staggering limitation of markets for exports. The loss of Continental European markets cut away one-third of Latin America's trade, or about $550,000,000 to $600,000,000 on the basis of 1938 statistics . . . Uniting the Americas through the economic implementation of the good neighbor policy is vital, and merits the full-hearted support of all of us. It is an important part of the defense of our country and of the American Way of Life. And, in addition, it is good business to support this program to the fullest, for business reasons alone. This hemisphere is building, not tearing down. The hemisphere will be constructing, not reconstructing in the postwar period. We have only scratched the economic potentialities of this hemisphere. To do this job right, we must put everyone's shoulder to the wheel—business, labor, banks and government.

"This is not a time for a fly-by-night approach to Latin American markets. This is not the time to reduce advertising programs. This is not the time to cut down representation in Latin America. I hope that our exporters will settle down to treating Latin American trade as a permanent proposition, just as the governments of all the American republics are going at inter-American relations on a comprehensive permanent basis . . ."

New "Bank" Proposed

Mr. Rovensky also outlined the proposed functions of an inter-American bank. "An inter-American bank would be useful for providing a meeting ground where the financial minds of the various nations could meet to work with each other on problems affecting their own welfare."

Resolutions in tribute to three deceased members of the association were adopted. A resolution in tribute to Col. Robert N. Harper, a past president of the association, was presented by Joshua Evans, jr. A resolution in tribute to John Poole, a past president of the association, was presented by John A. Reilly. A resolution in tribute to James A. Soper, late vice president and cashier of the Lincoln National Bank, was presented by Robert H. Lacey.

John A. Reilly, second vice president of the association and president of the Second National Bank, was in charge of arrangements for the meeting. A buffet supper was served.

Competitive Bids on Utility Issues Opposed

By the Associated Press

A proposal to compel competitive bidding for new utility issues over $1,000,000 was opposed yesterday by a succession of witnesses, the last of whom told the Securities Commission that "we have proved our case that the small dealer is going to be seriously hurt."

The witness was Joseph Scribner, of Pittsburgh, who summarized in a minute the views that had been put into the record by small security dealers from Philadelphia to Los Angeles.

Ignoring a prepared statement, he explained that as he understood the evidence, the big investment houses would be forced to enter the retail field—one now largely occupied by small firms—if competitive bidding was made compulsory.

"I don't welcome Mr. Stanley's competition in Pittsburgh," Scribner said, and sat down. (He referred to Harold Stanley, president of Morgan Stanley & Co., big New York house.)

The hearing will continue today.

One of the few witnesses who was not a small dealer was F. W. Ecker, a vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., who said that compulsory bidding would lead to the "deterioration of the investment banking group to the disadvantage of investors."

Ecker said he felt that it would "tend to permit the issuer to write his own ticket" and that it "might well lead to the evils of high pressure salesmanship."

The hearing attracted some of the outstanding financial figures, including Cyrus Eaton, of Cleveland, whose Otis & Co. has been a leader in the Middle West's fight against Eastern banking interests. The company is the outstanding supporter of the competitive-bidding proposal.

William Chamberlain, a former vice president of the United Light & Power Co., was one of the few individuals to support the recommendation. Testifying as a former issuer of securities, he said he felt that "there should be open and direct competition between primary underwriters."

In response to questions, Chamberlain asserted that he never had felt that Bonbright & Co., big New York house with whom his company formerly had done business, had dominated the company's affairs. Asked whether he felt that Otis & Co., with whom they later did business, had dominated his company, he replied:

"I think that Mr. Eaton dominated us—he was one of our largest stockholders—but his partners in Otis & Co. continually told us that his interest in us was much greater than in them."

$100,000,000 Issue Mapped By Steel Firm

Cleveland, Jan. 27 (AP).—Republic Steel Corporation disclosed today plans for a bond issue "in excess of $100,000,000" to refund all its existing long-term debt and to provide a small increase in working capital.

The issue, expected to be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission in early February, was described by the Nation's third largest steel concern as "the largest piece of industrial financing to be offered to the public in recent years."

"It is anticipated that Dillon, Read & Co., Glore, Forgan & Co., and Lehman Brothers will head the underwriting group," Republic said. The corporation did not state the interest rate the new bonds will carry.

The issue will replace publicly held bonds listed at $87,527,871 the end of 1939. Officials said this figure had declined slightly since then.

Philip Morris Plans $15,000,000 Preferred Issue

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—O. H. Chalkley, president of Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., announced the firm planned, subject to stockholders' approval, a new issue of about $15,000,000 of cumulative preferred stock.

A stockholders' meeting has been called for February 14 at the company offices in Richmond. The new stock, if approved, will be issued to stockholders in the ratio of one share for each six of common now held.

Chalkley said the company was negotiating with investment bankers for the purchase by them of any shares not subscribed by stockholders.

Proceeds of the proposed financing will be used to repay outstanding bank loans and to add to the working capital. Chalkley said details of the new issue have not yet been worked out.

List Works Unevenly Higher in Dull Deals; DuPont, Allied Chemical Up Substantially

New York, Jan. 27.—The stock market today managed to emerge with a slight average advance for the second time since January 10, but trends, actually, were highly irregular.

One or two pivotals were up 1 to 2 points on meager turnovers. Small fractions also were held by a few steels, rails, utilities, coppers, aircrafts and specialties. Minor losses, however, were plentiful at the close.

The Associated Press composite of 60 issues was up .1 of a point at 43.8. Of 675 stocks traded—about half the number listed on the stock exchange—256 advanced, 202 declined and 217 were unchanged.

The ticker tape merely crawled throughout the day's proceedings. Transfers of 357,920 shares were the smallest for a full session since September 16 last year. They compared with 411,960 Friday.

Buying timidity again was ascribed by brokers mainly to concern over the war, the cloudy tax outlook and fears of shocks incident to the Congress battle on the lease-lend bill. Part of the light bidding was attributed to the flow of earnings statements from important railroads and industrial corporations disclosing sharp improvement over 1939.

Steels steadied when another gain was estimated in this week's mill operations. On the revised capacity basis fixed by the American Iron & Steel Institute, production this week was placed at 97.1 per cent against 96.5 per cent last week. Both were new records for ingot output.

Contra-seasonal upturns in automobile sales, expanding retail spending and mounting freight loadings were seen as favorable straws in the wind.

Dupont and Allied Chemical were among the widest advancers. Minor improvement was retained by Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Pennsylvania, Marshall Field, Anaconda, Kennecott, Boeing, Bendix, American Airlines, Consolidated Edison, International Harvester and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

On the outside were Republic Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, General Electric, U. S. Gypsum, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone and N. Y. Central.

In a listless Curb, plus signs were tacked on Lake Shore, N. J. Zinc and Pacific Salt. A lower drift was exhibited by American Gas, Aviation & Transportation, Glen Alden Coal and Humble Oil. Transactions here were around 84,000 shares versus 99,000 in the preceding five-hour sesion.

Federal Outlays Pass 6 Billion In Fiscal Year

By the Associated Press

Federal expenditures for the current fiscal year passed $6,000,000,000 yesterday under the impetus of defense expenditures.

Although the figure of $6,034,999,222 reported by the Treasury yesterday was not half of the $13,202,370,970 budgeted for the year ending June 30, it indicated the pace of spending was picking up rapidly after a slow start last summer.

Defense accounted for $2,164,527,365 of the total, and was nearly equal to the $2,844,033,352 deficit incurred since last July 1. After making allowance for differences in bookkeeping in the two years, the spending figure was more than $1,000,000,000 in excess of the amount spent in the similar period of the preceding year.

Soft Drink Firms Return 46% on Average Capital

The Federal Trade Commission reported last night that six of the largest nonalcoholic beverage manufacturers had combined net income of $48,592,268 for 1939, representing a return of 46.5 per cent on average total capital of $104,455,232.

Wheat Drops On Snow News, Then Rallies

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Continuing the decline which has carried wheat values to the lowest level since before Christmas, future prices here sagged as much as ¾ cent today, but then steadied.

July and September contracts, which can be satisfied by delivery of 1941 grown grain, were weakest early in the session, due chiefly to selling inspired by snow over much of the belt. Later they rallied, while May wheat bore the brunt of selling, largely representing the undoing of spreads between the various deliveries.

Wheat closed ¼-⅜ lower than Saturday, May 84¼-84¾, July 78⅝-78¾; corn unchanged to ⅛ off, May 63, July 63⅜; oats ⅜ down; soybeans unchanged to ¼ off; rye ⅛-⅜ lower and lard ⅞ lower.

Indications that the cold wave had veered eastward instead of moving into the major winter wheat area and forecast of no decided change in temperature gave a favorable touch to weather developments.

Furniture Output Gains 15% in Year

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan 27 (AP). Seidman & Seidman, industrial accountants, reported today that furniture output in 1940 exceeded that of 1939 by 15 per cent and pay rolls and employment were up 11 and 8 per cent, respectively.

There are indications, the report said, that furniture operations will go still higher in 1941.

Very attractive, small, new, detached brick on one of the prettiest streets in this convenient close-in section. The house is nearing completion and contains five rooms, bath, full basement, deep lot to paved alley. Purchaser may select decorations and fixtures at this time. An unusual opportunity to buy an inexpensive home in a neighborhood of much higher priced homes. BOSS & PHELPS, NA. 9300.

The reception home in this unique house is 12 feet wide and is undoubtedly the most dollar-for-dollar value in a close in, highly restricted, residential area in Washington. The large den with a half-bath is to the left of the center-hall entrance. The low, custom-built mantel and the deep fireplace in the 24-ft. living room will surely appeal to you, as will the large attractive dining room, the huge rear deck verandа (over the two-car detached garage) is accessible through one of the 3 full size bedrooms. The built-in bar adds to the charm of the paneled recreation room. You must see this unusually attractive home just being completed on a large lot within a very short walking distance from direct downtown transportation and priced at less than $16,000. Call Mr. Shearer, HObart 4743. J. Wesley Buchanan, MEt. 1143.

No one can say that Mary Margaret McBride, the woman's "columnist of the air," whom you hear every day over WJSV at 3 p. m., doesn't get around. A couple of weeks ago she was out in the mid-West making a tour of places she knew as a child. Last week she was in Washington for the inauguration.

This week she's in Florida for a vacation—which includes working every day. But even while on vacation she gets around. For yesterday she broadcast from Orlando. Today it's to be Lake Wales. Wednesday it will be Lakeland; Thursday, Tampa, and Friday, Winter Haven. She gets to know an awful lot of radio engineers that way.

To most broadcasters such an unsettled way of broadcasting would be practically impossible. But Miss McBride has it over them in that she never has to prepare a script. All she uses are a few notes she scribbles here and there and her talk on the air is entirely impromptu.

But that lack of formality seems to please the listeners. To prove it, it wasn't long ago that Miss McBride had a dozen sponsors for her program, with 56 others waiting. "Printer's Ink," explaining her air appeal, not long ago said:

"A remarkable radio personality, but Miss McBride must also be given full credit for insisting that no product can be accepted on her program unless she has visited the factory producing it or given it a successful trial in her home."

Press Named New Secretary Of Trade Board

Appointment of William H. Press to succeed Col. Harrison Brand, jr., as executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade was announced yesterday.

Col. Brand, who has held the post for two years, resigned to become assistant to Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America. The change becomes effective February 1.

At the same time it was announced that Miss Elizabeth Glenn, a member of the board staff for ten years, has been named assistant to the executive secretary. The post to be vacated by Press will be filled at a later date.

Press, a native of Washington, is a graduate of McKinley High School and of the University of Maryland. He was the first executive secretary of the Washington Junior Board of Commerce and later served as Washington representative for the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. He became assistant to the executive secretary of the Board of Trade in 1936.

For about three years he has handled most of the board's statistical and legislative work and has been active in District tax matters. He is a member of the National Tax Association, the Tax Institute, the Government Research Association, the American Society for Public Administration, the National Municipal League and other organizations.

Col. Brand goes to the aeronautical chamber, an organization of aircraft manufacturers, at one of the busiest periods of its history. The organization represents the aircraft industry in many of its dealings with the Government in the defense program.

Col. Brand was commissioned in the Corps of Engineers after being graduated from West Point in 1941. He served with the engineers through the World War, but resigned from the Army in 1919. He is a lawyer, as well as an engineer, and served from 1927 to 1929 as a member of the Public Utilities Commission.

Radio Chains Sign Pact, U.S. Drops Charges

The Department of Justice yesterday dropped antitrust proceedings against National and Columbia Broadcasting Companies and Broadcast Music, Inc., after B. M. I. signed an agreement to refrain from certain practices in its current music war with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

At the same time the department announced it intends to proceed promptly with prosecution of ASCAP which failed to reach agreement with the Government in December.

The broadcasting companies formed B. M. I. in opposition to ASCAP. The department said the decree will not become effective until similar restraints have been imposed on ASCAP, whether by decree or limitation, otherwise B. M. I. would be placed at a competitive disadvantage.

ASCAP and BMI are rivals in a bitter feud which resulted in the barring of ASCAP music from broadcasts controlled by the big chains and also from some independent stations. The dispute began when N. B. C. and C. B. S. refused to renew ASCAP contracts which expired January 1.

The Government stepped into the picture December 27 when a stalemate developed in ASCAP-N. B. C.-C. B. S. negotiations. Threatening antitrust action against all the principals, Attorney General Robert H. Jackson said the public was in the position of a "neutral caught between two aggressive belligerents."

Albert Small, 61, Once Editor Here, Killed by Auto

Albert Small, 61, former Washington newspaperman, was killed by an automobile Friday in California, it was reported yesterday.

Coroner N. C. Houze, of Bakersfield, Calif., said the crash victim was identified yesterday, according to the Associated Press. Mr. Small's son, Albert Webster Small, left Washington last night to take charge of the body.

Mr. Small was city editor of The Washington Post in 1910 and from 1920 to 1922 was a Capitol Hill reporter on the Washington Herald. He was connected with the Washington Star as a copy editor and State editor for 15 years, before he left this city in June, 1937.

At the time of his death he was making a tour to gather information for a book on needed reforms of newspaper conditions in the United States. Two of his books, "On to the Post" and "As Is," have been published.

A native of Texas, Mr. Small started his newspaper career in 1900 on the Kansas City Star and worked at various times on newspapers in Mexico City, Havana, Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Paul, Ind.; Denver, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

In addition to his son, he is survived by one grandson, Albert W. Small, jr., of Washington.

31 District Selects Leave For Training

Washington's January quota of selectees was filled, with the exception of one man, yesterday when 31 men from 20 of the District's 25 local boards were sent to Baltimore for induction. One man remained behind because of illness.

Meanwhile, the War Department announced that after March 1, induction would be expedited to insure completion of the first quota of 800,000 men by June. Inductions are somewhat behind schedule, it was explained, due in part to delays in cantonment construction.

After physical examinations at Baltimore, selectees accepted by Army doctors will be sent to Fort Meade, Md., to be classified and given elementary military training. Substitutes will be provided this week for any men rejected at Baltimore.

The man prevented by illness from joining yesterday's quota will be sent to Baltimore as soon as he is recovered. Those sent there yesterday were:

Board 3, Richard Anthony Guyer; 4, Rubin Gerts; 5, Carl Harter Aehle; 6, Bernard Biddle Fulk, jr.; 7, Joseph Elbridge Russell; 10, Acey Simpson; 11, Leroy Marcus Cain; 12, Edgar Garfield Davis; 13, Wayne Alonzo West, Edward Lewis Fox and Aljerry Fred Saunders; 14, Martin E. Maxwell and Emanuel Jackson; 15, Carl Walfred, Theodore Emanuel and Kurby Lee Lofton; 16, James H. Thompson and Russell T. Nite; 17, Louis Raymond Newton; 18, Vito Linsalato and Earic Jones; 19, Herman Fred Davis, Robert Clifford Sanford, James Nathaniel Dean and Raymond Joseph Williams; 20, George William Lee; 21, Alonzo Mason; 22, Hugh Chester Armstrong and John Henry Price; 23, Fred William McCarthy; 25, Joe Nathan Bullock and Samuel Small.

Hearst's Huge Art Collection Goes on Sale Over Counter

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 27.—Your correspondent tonight bought part of the multimillion dollar art collection once belonging to William Randolph Hearst.

The purchase was a rare—possibly unique—Egyptian stone dish an inch and a half in diameter, certified as of about the year 50 B. C.

The price was 75 cents, and the sale was effected without the customary art auctioneers or intermediaries, over the counter of Gimbel's Department Store—one of the first transactions in an unprecedented art sale.

It is the disposal of the major part of the publisher's art acquisitions of a lifetime, now the property of the International Studio Art Corporation.

It is the largest art sale in history and the first collection of any size to be disposed of, like ordinary commodities, to the general public over the counters of a department store with price tags—a method selected because the vastness and value of the collection virtually precluded its disposition through ordinary art channels to the small circle of regular collectors.

An entire floor of the huge store has been stripped of its usual stock of children's goods and filled with the first portion of the collection, hundreds of thousands of items of paintings, sculpture, furniture, books, armor, china, jewelry—everything from medieval oak-paneled rooms to Benjamin Franklin's spectacles.

Several thousand specially invited guests, ranging from museum officials to charge account holders at Saks-Fifth Avenue, Gimbel's affiliate, where more of the collection will be sold, attended the opening.

The first purchaser was David E. K. Bruce, Andrew Mellon's son-in-law, who bought a fine set of old Delft china for $250.

John D. Rockefeller, jr., admiringly fondled a beautiful jeweled agate bowl attributed to Benvenuto Cellini and priced at $25,000. It was not disclosed whether he bought anything.

But many others did. The official seal that Abraham Lincoln used in the White House went for $750.

I saw a book collector eagerly grab up Anthony Trollope's original manuscript of "Orley Farm" and scribble out a check for $246. George Washington's leather-bound four-volume set of "Don Quixote" was there, for $2,900. There was a set of four beautiful medieval tapestries at $197,500. And pewter plates, jewelry and knicknacks ranging down to 35 cents.

The biggest item in the sale is a fifteenth century Spanish monastery, dismantled in 14,000 boxes in a Bronx warehouse, for which Hearst is reputed to have paid $500,000—now priced at $50,000, what it cost to be recrated for storage.

The sale will continue through the spring. Dr. Armand Hammer, the art dealer handling the sale, said it was expected that everything, despite its huge aggregate value, would be cleared out, because every item had been priced to sell, without regard to its original cost.

Service Engineers Of District Elect Col. George Mayo

Lieut. Col. George Mayo, in charge of the fortification section, Office of the Chief of Engineers, was elected president of Washington Post, Society of American Military Engineers, at a meeting yesterday at the Army and Navy Club. He succeeds Capt. A. F. E. Horn.

Others elected were Rear Admiral L. O. Cobert, director, United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, vice president; Maj. Victor V. Martin, Corps of Engineers Reserve, secretary-treasurer. Edward Janke, sr., engineer of the Quartermaster Office, Fort Myer, Va., was named a director to serve two years.

On behalf of the society, Col. J. Franklin Bell presented a plaque and medal to Lieut. James D. Tanner, 121st Engineers, District National Guard, for excellence in rifle fire. Lieut. Tanner was high engineer in the President's match at Camp Perry, Ohio, last summer.

Maj. Kenner F. Hertford, Corps of Engineers, recently returned from England, made an off-the-record talk.

Prisoner Likens Ruffle of Drums To Wings of Angel

Linwood H. Bradley, colored, 27, of Arlington, Va., would prefer a hitch in the Army to being in jail, but it seems as if he can't stay out of jail long enough to get into the Army.

About ten days ago, Arlington Selective Service Board No. 2 mailed a questionnaire to Bradley, but he wasn't at home and had left no forwarding address. Investigation disclosed he was in the Alexandria jail on a charge of drunkenness. The questionnaire was forwarded to him there and he returned it.

Several days ago as the board was preparing to notify Bradley to report for a physical examination, a letter arrived from the registrant. It read in part:

Dear Sir:

"Just a few lines to let you know where I am. I am in Charlottesville in jail, and if you want me, send down here and get me, please, for I am willing to serve any amount of time in the Army that you all want . . . Please send somebody after me."

Board officials said they would notify Bradley to report to them for a physical examination when he had finished his sentence.

Firemen Must Serve if Army Calls, Commissioners Rule

Washington's draft-age firemen, in particular a private at No. 13 Engine Company with 1. years in the service, will have as good a chance as anyone else to go into the Army under a new ruling of the District Commissioners.

The Commissioners, it was learned, have turned down the deferment request of Private Edward S. Ramey, 35, of 5227 Kansas Avenue Northwest, and declared it will be the District's policy not to ask deferment for firemen because of their civilian duties.

Ramey's request was indorsed by Fire Chief Stephen Porter. Commissioner David McCoach said yesterday that their action was based on the belief that the draft would not take enough firemen to affect seriously the efficiency of the force.

Ramey has taken his deferment request to the Selective Service Appeals Board. Pending their action, he declined to discuss his own case. Neither would Fire Chief Porter comment on the Commissioners' action.

It was learned, however, that fire department officials have been taking their own fire-fighting lessons from the present war, and would prefer to see the Washington force kept intact during the emergency.

Out of a force of 872 men, about 290 registered for Selective Service and of these, about 60 are believed eligible to be called.

Ramey, with 13 years on the force, is a "seasoned" fireman, and that was the main reason for the Fire Department's request that he be deferred.

He is attached to No. 13 engine company. He is married, but his wife is employed by the Telephone Company, and he was unable to claim any dependents. The maximum age limit for selective service is 35, and Ramey will be 36 on May 2.

Don't be an EASY MARK and accept a substitute—Get Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules — the original and genuine. Look for the Gold Medal on the box — 35 cents.
Other symptoms of weak kidneys and irritated bladder may be backache, puffy eyes, shifting pains, burning or scanty passage.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Chinese Here Celebrate New Year

Yesterday was New Year's Day to a fraction of Washington's population—the Chinese colony—but its members are saving the main part of the celebration until Sunday afternoon.

In the little shops in the Chinese center, in the neighborhood of Sixth and H Streets Northwest, the traditional New Year passed quietly yesterday, while plans were brewing for the dragon dance and other festivities in the street Sunday.

Although January 1 is now officially observed as New Year's Day in modern China, its people—even those in the Capital of this Western democracy—still cling to the tradition of this colorful celebration.

The Rev. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church, said plans for the festivities here were not yet complete but that they would follow tradition, of course.

Gaiety will be overshadowed by colony said flowers would probably concern over hostilities in their native land, and a member of the be sold at the celebration for a war relief fund.

The ancient Chinese New Year begins with the first moon after the sun enters the constellation Aquarius, and may fall on any date between January 21 and February 19.

Three Named To House Unit On D. C. Funds

Three Democrats were appointed yesterday to the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations to serve with Chairman Mahon, of Texas.

The new members are Representatives Harry P. Beam, of Illinois; Vincent F. Harrington, of Iowa, and J. Parnell Thomas, of Texas. All three are new members of the House Appropriations Committee. They were assigned by Chairman Taylor, of Colorado.

Retained on the subcommittee were Representative Houston (Democrat), of Kansas, and Representatives Stefan, of Nebraska; Case, of South Dakota, and Lambertson, of Kansas.

Beam is a Chicago lawyer and former assistant corporation counsel of the city. He came to Congress in 1930. Harrington, of Sioux City, Iowa, has been an instructor in history and economics and athletic director at Portland (Oreg.) University. He entered Congress in 1936. Thomas, of Houston, Tex., is a World War veteran. He was first elected to the Seventy-fifth Congress.

The House District Committee held its first meeting of the Seventy-seventh Congress yesterday and then recessed for two weeks, while Chairman Randolph recuperates from an illness.

District Commissioners John Russell Young and David McCoach, jr., told the committee that they were looking forward to "a very constructive session" this year and promised their cooperation.

Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel, outlined some of the legislation which the Commissioners propose to submit later. Amendment of the income tax law along the lines of the Dirksen bill will be one of the first legislative objectives, he said.

Creation of a District civil service system will be sought, Keech said. Other bills to be offered will propose enlargement of the powers of the Commissioners, amendment of the child labor law, modernization of the incorporation law and regulation of the small loan business.

Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Texas, as chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee, promised that hearings would be held this year on small loan legislation.

U.S. Marshals Held Liable to Suit For Defamation

Holding Federal marshals "have no political functions," the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday declared that marshals are liable to be sued for what they say about other people.

The court ordered United States Marshal John B. Colpoys to defend defamation suits against him by two former deputies.

Colpoys dismissed Deputies William M. Gates and John B. Crawford after the Warring jury-fixing scandal several years ago. Gates and Crawford sued Colpoys for a total of $40,000 for statements he made in announcing their dismissal.

Edgewood Arsenal Contract Is Let For 200 Houses

By the Associated Press

The Public Building Administration awarded a $677,000 contract yesterday to the Nelson-Pedley Co., of Philadelphia for construction of 200 housing units for families of enlisted men at Edgewood Arsenal, Edgewood, Md.

The contractor's fee was fixed at $35,000, and the work is to be completed in 130 days.

Army Land Deal Held Up Over Fees

Indianapolis, Jan. 27 (AP).—Norman M. Littell, Assistant United States Attorney General in charge of the land division, told newsmen today he had stopped Government acceptance of all titles to land being bought for the Madison (Ind.) Army ordnance proving ground because of what he termed "exorbitant and unjustified" real estate agents' commissions and abstractors' fees.

Littell said that under contracts with the Army Quartermaster Corps, Paul L. McCord, Indianapolis real estate man, was collecting 6½ per cent commission for buying the land, while real estate agents' usual commission in Midwest rural districts was 2 or 3 per cent.

FORD ECONOMY WINS AGAIN!
FIRST PLACE IN ITS CLASS
GILMORE-GRAND CANYON ECONOMY RUN
23.05 MILES PER GALLON
AT AN AVERAGE SPEED OF 43.19 MILES PER HOUR!

Earl Gilmore, President of the Gilmore Oil Company, awards trophy to William Knopp, driver of the winning Ford car. Al Stuebing, Hollywood Ford dealer entering the car, looks on.
For the fourteen-hour run the stock model 1941 Ford averaged better than 43 miles an hour over the grueling 590.3-mile course from Los Angeles to the Grand Canyon—through city traffic, across the Mojave Desert and Boulder Dam, up and down the winding roads of three high mountain ranges buffeted by stubborn headwinds, and over ice and slush for the last hundred miles with four inches of snow on the road at the finish! The run from start to finish was under the supervision of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association. This Ford victory should conclusively prove to every motorist the surpassing economy of the Ford V-8.
That's official proof of the big, beautiful 1941 Ford's downright pinch-penny economy. Ask any Ford dealer to give you the keys to a 1941 Ford—drive it yourself—and you'll want to own "the low-priced car with the room, the ride, the view, and economy, too!"
